Foe Is Shot By Mystery Gunman in Hotel Attack

Assailant Escapes in Auto With Women Companions.

Police Checking Victim's Identity

A daring daylight shooting late yesterday left one bullet-riddled victim on a midtown sidewalk and terrorized scores of passersby in front of the Annapolis Hotel, Twelfth and H streets, northwest.

The shooting was perpetrated by an unidentified white man who drove up to the hotel with two women companions in a black coupe shortly after 7 p. m.

Swiftly stepping from behind the wheel of his car, the gunman fired four shots at a man lounging against the hotel wall. The victim at Emergency Hospital gave his name as Joseph Morris, 30, and his residence as the Ebbitt Hotel. A check of the hotel revealed no such tenant.

Condition Serious.

The bullets penetrated Morris' abdomen in two places, the other two shots ricocheting against the hotel. Hospital attendants said Morris' condition was serious.

Although conscious, the wounded man refused to give police any information about the shooting. Their only clew was the license number of the car driven by the gunman. On checking that they learned the man to whom it was issued was unknown at the address listed against the tag numbers.

The only information police had about the shooting victim early last night was his assertion that he had only recently come to the Capital from Cincinnati. He said he was staying with a friend at the Ebbitt but refused to give the latter's name.

Quarrel Precedes Shooting.

Detective Sergts. A. D. Mansfield and Arthur Fihelly, baffled by Morriss' refusal to talk, remained at his bedside as surgeons removed the bullets.

According to a doorman at the hotel, a brief but bitter exchange of words took place between the two men preceding the shooting. They appeared to be arguing about possession of an automobile. The shooting began just after the gunman shouted:

"And not only that but you did my friends dirt, too!"

Posse Hunts 9 In Prison Dash

Houston, Tex., July 30 (AP).—A pack of bloodhounds and a posse of 50 men tonight sought the trail of 9 Texas convicts who sawed through the bars of the old trusty building at the Harlem State Prison farm early today and made their getaway. The farm is about 25 miles west of Houston.

One of the prisoners was serving a life term for robbery, another was under a 25-year sentence, and another for 16 years. The others were short-termers.

The break followed closely on that of three desperadoes who escaped from the death house at Huntsville July 22. None of the three condemned men has been caught.

Three sets of tracks were found, indicating the men separated into groups of three shortly after they squeezed through the sawed bars.

The men were members of a construction crew for a new building at the farm and had been quartered in the old trusty house. They were not trusties.

The life termer was Lewis Carter, sentenced for robbery. Jack Cade was up for 35 years on a robbery with fire arms conviction, and Paul Jacob Deaton was sentenced to 16 years on conviction of robbery by assault and burglary.

Others who escaped were Robert Thompson, George S. Huston, Nonie Dobbs, Horace Durham, G. F. Houston and J. N. Frame.

Nervy Chauffeur Balks Banker's Assassination

Zargoza, Spain, July 30 (AP).—The courage of a chauffeur today saved Daniel Riu Periquet, governor of the Foreign Bank of Spain, from assassins.

The assassins erected a barricade outside the city limits in an effort to stop his car, but the chauffeur drove through the obstruction and sped on under a hail of bullets. The banker said he knew of no personal enemies.

Drive to Hire 15,000 Idle Here Opened

Special Committee Puts "Give a Job" Plan Into Action.

A "Give a Job" campaign, the object of which will be to sign up 15,000 persons who will undertake to give a job to an unemployed person for one year, was proposed yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen at a meeting of a special employment committee composed of representatives of business, professional, civic, charitable and official organizations.

"We sold Liberty bonds during the war on the grounds of patriotism," Commissioner Allen reminded the gathering, and asked:

"Why isn't it just as patriotic at the present time to give a job to some person who is so bad off he has to go on the relief rolls?"

Whatever the ultimate outcome of the plan, it produced one extra job immediately. John Locher, secretary of the Washington Building Trade Council, said he would hire an additional stenographer at a salary of $25 a week beginning today. There was applause.

Pretender to Austrian Throne Going to Italy

Brussels, Belgium, July 30 (U.P.).—Young Archduke Otto von Hapsburg, pretender to the throne of Austria, and his mother, the former Empress Zita, plan to proceed to Italy this week-end, it was learned tonight.

Otto, whose aspirations are believed by Austrian monarchists to be in the ascendant, has been living with his mother at Steenockerzeel Castle in exile since they were forced to flee at the end of the World War, when Austria became a republic.

Labor Board Court Rights Challenged

Decisions Unwarranted, Says Firm; Two Steel Mills to Reopen.

Industry offered its first challenge last night to the right of the National Labor Relations Board to sit as a supreme court over industrial disputes.

Powers of the new Government agency were questioned by John A. Ritchie, of the Chicago Motor Coach Co., which is involved in a controversy with NRA over reinstatement of 10 former employes.

The company insists the workers were discharged because of inefficiency. The National Labor Board, which the present agency replaced, held the men were dismissed because of union activities and

Drought Unbroken By Flood of Silver, Says Morgenthau

Secretary Morgenthau is probably questioned more—and answers less—about the Government's silver-buying program than anything else, according to the Associated Press.

Returning from a Montana ranch vacation yesterday, he was asked by a reporter whether Federal silver purchases had improved conditions in the West.

"Well, they didn't do much for the drought," he replied.

Eight Harvesters Die in Blast.

Niort, France, July 30 (AP).—Eight wheat harvesters were killed and several others injured today when their threshing machine engine blew up. The explosion set fire to the grain and a farmhouse.

Marconi Invents Radio Beams To Steer Ships Through Fog

Santa Margherita Ligure, Italy, July 30 (AP).—The mariners' fear of fog, darkness and unfamiliar channels may be dissolved in the future by Senator Guglielmo Marconi's latest invention—a microwave harbor lighthouse. The noted inventor successfully demonstrated it today.

With a score of high-ranking British and Italian naval and merchant marine officials aboard, Marconi, with blind navigation, sailed his yacht, Electra, into Sestri Levante, utilizing his land and ship microwave piloting apparatus.

The only indication of where the ship was heading came from the red and green dial oscillator. The acoustic signal buzzed corroboration of the oscillator's indication. The helmsmen aboard the yacht merely obeyed these signals, coming from the microwave transmitting station on shore and relayed by electric harbor pilots or reflector buoys.

Marconi's new apparatus is set up at several points: First, an ultra-short wave transmission station on a high promontory about 300 feet above the sea here.

Third, a receiving station aboard the yacht which has two kinds of indicators, a dial and a loudspeaker. So long as the ship pursued a direct course for the harbor, the dial stood midway between the green and red sections. The slightest variation to one side or the other caused a corresponding movement of the indicator.

The inventor predicted all harbors would be equipped with such devices within a few years. He said they would save hundreds of vessels from collision.

Stockyards Strike May Halt Packing

9,000 Butchers Said to Be Ready to Join Walkout.

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's personal intervention was awaited tonight as the strike which has locked up the big Chicago Stockyards threatened to spread to "Packingtown."

Semiofficial word was that the NRA chief, aroused by the long disagreement between stockyards employers and their workers, would fly here tomorrow or Wednesday to take a hand.

Facing a layoff, anyway, unless more stock gets through the peaceful blockade about the yards, the packing house killers and butchers were reported "ready and anxious" to walk out.

Opposed by Union.

Their union, the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, officially was opposed to the move, according to Pat E. Gorman, international president, but he said "strike feeling is crystalizing."

Claiming 9,000 members in the packing plants—traditionally open shop—it was conceded that the union, with some sympathizers following, could halt the production of beef.

Only Government-owned cattle, bought up in the drought-ridden Northwest, were handled in the pens of the stockyards proper today. Hiring nonunion labor, the Government cattlemen continued their business of distributing the steers among the packers to be canned for relief clients.

Early Peace Predicted.

The strikers, 800 members of the Livestock Handlers Union had agreed to this. There was a possibility, however, that union killers in the packing plants might refuse to handle this stock.

Commission house men began business on a small scale, after a complete shutdown, buying and selling small lots of stock in railroad feeding pens outside the yards.

The striking handlers, Attorney Redmond E. Brennan said, opposed a general packing strike, and declared it would not be sanctioned by the American Federation of Labor. He predicted peace "within two days, or by the end of the week."

New Plan Speeded To End Truck Strike

Minneapolis, July 30 (AP).—Fresh hopes for settlement of the truck drivers strike were inspired today by reports that the Federal mediators were framing new peace terms.

At the same time military restrictions on truck movements were relaxed, though vigilance against picketing by strikers was maintained.

Terms of the reported new recommendations for dissolving the controversy were not disclosed by the Rev. Francis Haas and E. H. Dunnigan, Federal represenatives. They indicated their proposals would not be given out until they had been submitted to both sides.

Some 6,000 of the city's trucks were operating, alleviating public inconvenience from the strike. Wholesale meat trucks plied the streets. Steps were taken to permit

St. Louis, July 30 (AP).—Burglars who apparently feared heat prostration took extra precautions in their work over the week-end.

Shaft Will Rise As a Monument To Depression

Charleston, W. Va., July 30 (Spl.).—What is declared to be the first undertaking of its kind in the State, and probably the entire country, a monument to the depression, is being erected here.

It is a shaft of Kentucky limestone, 8 feet square and 35 feet high, which is to be labeled, "Memorial to Depression," and will carry the legend, "Educational and Impressive, It Taught Us to Be Human."

The shaft also will provide a means of recording for future history the impressions that the depression period have had upon those who care to describe them. An archway will be built and in it will be a tablet, on which will be placed a book. On the pages those who care to do so may transcribe their views of the depression and the lessons to be derived from it.

Sinclair Dons Enemy Cloak To Get Votes

'Epic' Plan, to End All Poverty in State, Is Drawing Support.

By Raymond Clapper.

Los Angeles, July 30.—California, which can always be counted upon to provide a good show, is making even politics a real spectacle this year by offering Upton Sinclair, the veteran Socialist pamphleteer, in a daring attempt to kidnap the Democratic nomination for Governor.

He's serious about it. So are thousands of California voters, so much so that the crusading author is conceded by many an edge in the primary August 28.

Audiences pay to get into his political meetings. Voters have bought 180,000 copies of one of his campaign pamphlets. He issues a weekly campaign newspaper which has a circulation of 175,000 each issue. His followers have organized 800 clubs throughout the State. Informal polls all show him leading.

Sinclair has concluded, after a lifetime of Socialist pemphleteering, that the practical chances of success are better by moving into an established major party organization than by standing as a Socialist party candidate. Twice he has been the Socialist candidate for Governor and once for Senator. His top vote was about 60,000, that representing. Sinclair says, the number of voters who could be persuaded to step outside regular party lines. So now he is trying to take possession of one of the old parties and then bore from within at the present order.

McAdoo Backs Creel.

His leading opponent is George Creel, who also is an author and a lifelong reformer, but more conventional in his ideas and his methods of campaigning than Sinclair. He has the aggressive support of Senator William G. McAdoo's powerful organization. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson indorsed Creel while in San Francisco during the general strike.

Postmaster General Farley spent several days in California last week, and while it is widely suspected that he favors Creel, he has not so indicated by overt word or act, though many expect this may be forthcoming before the primaries. If anything happens by way of Administration aid, it is likely to be the withdrawal of Justus Wardell, a survivor of the old Detwiler organization, who is splitting most of the anti-Sinclair vote with Creel. Friends of Creel have expected that Wardell would be given an important Federal appointment and thus eliminated. Minor candidates have either withdrawn or disappeared. If Wardell should withdraw, Sinclair's chance would drop in the face of united opposition.

Meantime, the author of "The Jungle" is showing the regular politicians a number of new tricks.

As the parched, drought-blighted areas of the Middle West and the great plains received only scattered, transitory relief from last week's near-record heat wave, Washington, refreshed by Sunday's heavy rainfall, reported a maximum temperature of only 89 degrees yesterday.

The high reading was recorded at 4 p. m., and the Weather Bureau predicted today would be fair without much change in temperature. Southwest winds which blew yesterday will switch to northwest today, the Weather Bureau said.

Yesterday's low mark was 69, recorded at 3 a. m. The average humidity was 60 here. Police reported no heat prostrations.

Terry Druggan Freed From Atlanta Prison

Atlanta, July 30 (AP).—Federal officials today disclosed that Terry Druggan, one of Chicago's prohibition era beer barons, had been released from the Federal Penitentiary after serving two years for violation of income tax laws.

Warden A. C. Aderholt said Druggan was released last Friday but the records had been locked up and he did not recall just how much of his sentence had been served.

Dollfuss' Dying Request That Foe Rule Is Told At Trial of Two Slayers

Ambassador Paul May, Of Belgium, Dies Here

Veteran in Diplomatic Service Began Career in 1895.

Paul May, Belgian Ambassador to the United States since April, 1931, died at 7:17 p. m. yesterday at the Emergency Hospital. He had been operated on for gallstones on Saturday.

The Ambassador, who was 61, is survived by his widow and three daughters, Francoise, Alberta Elizabeth and Ghislaine. All three daughters are at present in Belgium.

The Ambassador died in the city where he began his diplomatic career. He first came here in May, 1895, as an attache at the Belgian Embassy. Since then, he has served at posts throughout the world.

He was born in October, 1872, and educated at the University of Brussels, where he received the degree of doctor of civil laws and political science, and later at Oxford, in England. After passing with distinction his examination for the foreign service, he served for a while at the foreign office in Brussels before being dispatched to this country.

Suitor Hunted After Denver Bride Vanishes

Police Fear Kidnaping by Admirer Who Threatened Missing Woman.

Denver, Colo., July 30 (AP).—A rejected suitor who threatened to kill Mrs. Gladys Mandy Smith, a Denver bride, unless she divorced her husband and married him, was sought today for questioning in connection with her disappearance.

Police, assisted in their investigation by Department of Justice agents, believed Mrs. Smith may have been kidnaped.

A sorority sister of the missing woman, police said disclosed that Mrs. Smith told her of being threatened by a former suitor.

This man appeared at Leadville while Mrs. Smith was visiting her mother there and induced her to go for an automobile ride with him, police were told. Stopping the car on a mountain pass along a cliff, which dropped 1,000 feet, the man was quoted as saying:

"You are going to leave your husband for good and marry me or I will drive the car over the cliff and kill us both."

Mrs. Smith prevailed upon him to give her time in which to think things over.

At the time of Mrs. Smith's visit to Leadville, a $100,000 alienation of affections suit was pending against her mother, Mrs. Edward Mandy, of Pueblo. It was filed by Mrs. Smith's young husband, Bernard Smith, who later withdrew it, and Mrs. Smith returned to Denver with him to live.

'Fox's' Prison Term Upheld In Lindy Hoax

Appeals Court Says Means' Aid Must Serve Time in McLean Fraud.

Conviction of Norman T. Whitaker, alias "The Fox," on a charge of conspiring with Gaston B. Means to steal $35,000 from Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, was affirmed by the District Court of Appeals yesterday. Whitaker was sentenced to 18 months by a District jury.

Whitaker, Nationally known as a chess player, was charged with acting with Means in the enactment of a dramatic confidence scheme through which, they told Mrs. McLean, they could effect the return to its parents of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby. Their story, Mrs. McLean said, was that the actual kidnapers, with whom they were in contact, had $49,000 in "hot" money in Chicago.

They are said to have told Mrs. McLean the "snatchers" would not return the infant unless Mrs. McLean traded them $35,000 in good money for the marked bills. Prior to that, Means is alleged to have obtained $104,000 from Mrs. McLean, on the pretext that he was carrying on negotiations with the kidnapers and was about to recover the baby.

Dr. W. R. Johnson 'Pinch Hits' For R. W. Johnson; Fun Begins

To start at the beginning:

Dr. Robert William Johnson, surgeon, with offices in the Medical Arts Building, is visting his mother in Windsor, S. C.

While he is away, Dr. William Robert Johnson, surgeon, with offices in the Medical Arts Building, is treating Dr. Robert William Johnson's patients.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Robert William Johnson received a call, asking that her husband go at once to the steamship Calmar.

Mrs. Robert William Johnson relayed the information to Dr. William Robert Johnson, who responded with alacrity.

While he was treating the patient, the Calmar pulled up anchor and put out into the Chesapeake Bay.

A short time later, at 4 o'clock, patients began to [illegible] in the office of Dr. Robert William Johnson. They were informed by Mrs. Johnson that Dr. William Robert Johnson would attend them.

When Dr. William Robert Johnson failed to appear, Mrs. Robert William Johnson telephoned Mrs. William Robert Johnson asking where the heck Dr. William Robert Johnson was.

At 5 o'clock, Mrs. Robert William Johnson received a radiogram from Dr. William Robert Johnson informing her that he was on the Calmar and that its next stop was Philadelphia and he would return just as soon as he could.

The Philadelphia maritime exchange reported today that the Calmar had run aground in the Delaware River mud south of Philadelphia and that the freighter was stuck fast.

So, while calls for Dr. Robert William Johnson and calls for Dr. William Robert Johnson piled up today, Mrs. Robert William Johnson took a philosophical attitude, remarking:

"It never rains but it pours."

The brothers, incidentally, are twins.

One Claims Chancellor Called on Rintelen to Make Peace.

Killing Accident, Defendant Says

But Prosecutor Reads Confession Revealing Shooting Details.

Vienna, July 30 (AP).—Startling testimony that Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, while dying from an assassin's bullet last Wednesday, asked that a man identified with his opponents—Dr. Anton Rintelen—be called on to bring peace to Austria, was offered today by Emil Fey, former vice chancellor, at the court-martial of two men involved in Dollfuss' slaying.

Rintelen, in a hospital seriously wounded, was the Austrian minister to Italy and the man selected by Nazi revolters as a successor to Dollfuss.

"The last words I heard the dying chancellor speak," Fey testified, "were, 'Rintelen must make peace.'

"'Let there be no blood,' he said, and a little later he called on Rintelen to restore peace to the country."

Did Not Specifically Resign.

Fey made the statement, which took many in the court by surprise, after he was asked whether Dollfuss resigned his office as he lay dying.

Fey replied that he did not hear, in so many words, that Dollfuss intended resigning, but did hear him invoke the aid of Rintelen as the man who could bring peace to the nation.

The former vice chancellor also corroborated the testimony of both defendants—Otto Planetta, discharged sergeant who confessed the actual killing, and Franz Holzweber, charged with being a leader of the raid on the chancellery—that they had been guaranteed safe conduct to the German border if they surrendered.

"I heard the promise made, and I told them they could rely on it," Fey said.

"Was that after the death of the chancellor?" the vice chancellor was asked.

"Yes," he replied

Raiders Well Disguised.

Fey also testified the raiders were well disguised and that when they came in a body to the chancellery, they were regarded by everyone as genuine "Deutschmeister" troops. (The invaders wore uniforms of the Deutschmeister regiment.)

Questioned persistently, Fey stated three times that the putschists had been guaranteed safe conduct to the border if they surrendered.

"And I insisted that the promise be kept," Fey added.

He declared that the German minister to Austria came to the chancellery at his telephonic request. The minister, Kurt Rieth, came to Ballhausplatz, but was reluctant to enter the building as requested by the putschists, Fey said.

"But they insisted they would not surrender unless the Austrian promise of safe conduct was witnessed by a German minister, so he finally came in," Fey said.

Death Intentions Denied.

Both the defendants denied they had any intention of killing any one, least of all Dollfuss.

Planetta's version of the attack on the chancellor differed radically from the killing as he is alleged to have described it before taking the witness stand.

"We were all told that the object of the raid was to capture the Dollfuss government, but that no one must be hurt—that our success depended on keeping the cabinet members imprisoned but unharmed and in our power," he related.

He said he killed Dollfuss accidently. At first, he said, he did not know whom he had shot, and was dismayed on learning it was the chancellor.

After taking testimony of Fey and several other witnesses, the court-martial was adjourned to midnight.

Leader Fails to Appear.

A striking feature of Holzweber's testimony was an admission that "the real leader" of the putsch, from whom he received the command to capture Ballhausplatz, failed to show up after the building was taken to tell him what move to make next.

Stopping dramatically as he addressed the judges, he turned to Fey and asked him to corroborate that statement.

"Didn't I tell you our leader had failed to appear, and didn't I ask you to help us bring the whole thing to an end peacefully?" he asked Fey.

Then Fey, addressing the court, said:

"What this man says is true."

The leader who ran away from the putsch was "a man in civilian dress known to us by several names, but from whom we received instructions regularly," Holzweber said.

"In other words," interrupted the presiding judge, "you don't want to tell us."

Wife Sees Frau Dollfuss.

Shortly before the trial opened—at 6:15 p. m.—the wife of Planetta had pleaded to be allowed to talk to Frau Dollfuss—not, she said to beg for mercy, but to ask the bereaved woman not to hate her.

News from the "front" in Styria and Carinthia, where the Nazi forces were strongest in the revolt, was scarce today. The government insisted that the situation was well in hand.

Dispatches to Belgrade from the Austrian border told of explosions indicating that railway bridges and roads had been blown up by the rebels in Styria.

On the other hand, some 350 more Nazis had crossed into Yugoslavia with arms and three armored cars. This brought past 1,000 the number of refugees in that country.

Confession Is Read.

That the killing of Dollfuss was a "personal" act, not contemplated by the putschists, was indicated by Planetta's purported confession, which was read at the court-martial.

This defendant, a former army staff sergeant, was dismissed for Nazi political activity. The statement attributed to him gave this as the motive for the crime.

The two Nazis were sunburned and healthy looking, showing no signs of having been beaten, as had been reported. Both were in civilian clothes. Their shoe laces had been removed to guard against suicide.

Both defendants are married and neither had a criminal record. Planetta is 34 years old and Holzweber 29.

The men faced the court, composed of Maj. Gen. Albert Obarwagar, three other army officers and a civilian, with heads up and calm expressions.

The prosecutor read the purported confession, which stated that the putschists had agreed there would be "no slaughter" when they occupied the chancellery.

Two Shots at Chancellor.

"Since I was dismissed from the army for my political activity," Planetta was quoted as saying in the document, "I had an unextinguishable hatred against the chancellor, whom I regarded as an exponent of a policy directed gainst national Socialism.

"I and a few companions stormed up the big staircase on the right of the entrance to the chancellery * * *

"Suddenly we found ourselves in the room of the chancellor and opposite him.

"I raised my pistol and without any exchange of words fired two shots at the chancellor.

"I saw him collapse.

"Two of my comrades, after a short time, laid out Dollfuss on a couch. I was drawn out of the room by one of my comrades."

After the surrender of the chancellery by 144 Nazis, all of whom were arrested instead of being given safe transit to Germany, it was said that Dollfuss died without medical or spiritual attention.

Safe Conduct Denied.

The Nazis were refused the promised safe trip out of the country after it was discovered that Dollfuss was dead.

The attempt to remove Rintelen from the hospital revealed that the politician, Minister to Rome until Dollfuss was killed, was wounded rather than dead. His wife had said, following his arrest last Wednesday night, that he was killed in his cell. The government had denied it.

Rintelen was named as the new chancellor in a broadcast while Nazis held the government radio station.

Rumors of approaching restoration of the monarchy continued, becoming more strong.

The Socialists, who engaged in civil war against Dollfuss last February, revealed today that the funeral of Josef Gerl, Socialist bomber who was hanged the day before Dollfuss died, was held at the same time as that of Dollfuss.

Soviet-U. S. Debts Parley Hope Dims

Conference Will Resume Thursday, Says Hull.

Negotiations with Soviet Russia on the more than $500,000,000 debts claimed by this Government will be continued Thursday, Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced yesterday after a conference with Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky.

Little hope was held in some quarters that a settlement could be reached because other countries have failed to reach an agreement with the Soviets.

The conversations have been conducted with rigid secrecy on both sides. They were transferred to Washington after American Ambassador William C. Bullitt reached an impasse in his talks with the Soviet foreign office.

U. S. to Advise States Lacking Relief Cash

Survey Ordered to Find What Share of Cost They May Pay.

The Federal Government is now preparing to act as financial adviser to States which have been having trouble with their relief finances and are unable to contribute adequate funds to match grants allocated by the Emergency Relief Administration.

Acting Administrator Corrington Gill, of the FERA, said yesterday a survey had been ordered "to inform the Government as to what share of relief costs the States might be reasonably expected to pay during the coming year."

These data will be supplied each State, it was explained, to enable its Legislature to provide necessary appropriations.

Forty-two Legislatures will be in session this winter.

Mr. Gill said Lent D. Upson, of Detroit, said to be an authority on municipal and State taxation and financing, had been placed in charge of the survey.

"He will study the financial structures and potential resources of the various State and municipalities and will keep in constant contact with and give cooperative guidance and suggestions to field men and State relief officials," Mr. Gill explained.

FERA officials declined to estimate what they considered a "fair share" of the helief cost which the States are expected to contribute. They explained that each State is dealth with separately on the basis of its ability to pay, and no hard and fast rules are applited to the whole set-up.

In some cases, such as in Florida and Arkansas, however, this "fair share" has ben practically nothing, the FERA furnishing about 95 per cent of all relief funds expended in the States. It was said these States are willing, but financially unable, to cooperate.

Officials pointed out that the Louisiana Legislature has refused ot appropriate funds for unemployment relief, despite demands by the FERA. Federal grants are now being supplemented only by city and county contributions in that State.

Relief funds have been exhausted in several States while the Legislatures have been out of session, thus raising difficult problems because of the expense of calling a special session.

Italian Divisions Watch at Border; Dollfuss Mourned

Rome, July 30 (AP).—Italian troops remained on watch a tthe Austran border tonight. Some were concentrated also near the Yugoslavian frontier, across which are many Austrian Nazis.

While the troops watched quietly, with no sign that they expected orders to move, Premier Mussolini, Pope Pius and other high Italian and Vatican officials mourned for the slain Chancellor Dollfuss.

Mussolini bowed his head in grief as Cardinal Marchetti Selvaggini gave his blessings for the assassinated chancellor in memorial services at St. Ignatius Church.

The Pope told 200 Austrians in an audience that he would constantly pray for their strife-torn country and expressed indignation over the assassination.

The Pope also gave permission for Dollfuss' body to be removed from the temporary grave and laid beside that of former Chancellor Mgr. Seipl in the Church of Gedaechtnis in Vienna.

Present Woodstock Club to Finish Season

Woodstock, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—The Woodstock Athletics will finish the season with the present club, according to Dick Forsythe, manager of the local nine. With Irwin, Sheetz, Brewbaker and Dovel representing the pitching staff, and Lambert and R. Baker filling the catching position, the local clubs seems to be well enough balanced to face the Valley League clubs for the remainder of the current season.

Woodstock will face the Harrisonburg nine here Thursday in its next Valley League encounter. Ford Irwin probably will get the pitching assignment.

Sinclair, in Role of Democrat, Is California's Political Show

Californians are volatile and stampede when a novelty interests them. They will pay and cheer for a good showman, as they did for Aimee Semple McPherson. They are rushing in thousands to join the new Utopian Society, lured not only by its novel economics, but by the ritual and mystery used to dress up the political creed.

Sinclair is offering them something different. He calls himself the Epic candidate and his platform is the Epic plan. The label comes—like the alphabetical names at Washington—from the Sinclair slogan: "End Poverty in California."

The Epic plan has three features. One is for establishment of land colonies, factories and scrip for the unemployed so they may carry on an economic system of their own alongside the regular system of private profit engaged in by those who have employment.

"Soak-the-Rich" Plea Heard.

The second is the familiar one of repealing the State sales tax and substituting drastic income and inheritance levies on higher brackets, with increased tax exemption for land and real property in use and a higher tax on unused land.

The third calls for old age, disability and widows' pensions

The novelty lies in the first feature, that of setting up farm communities and factories for unemployed and providing a special scrip as a medium of exchange. Originally the plan was to provide State funds for building such factories, but now Sinclair is emphasizing the feasibility of renting equipment from private concerns who have idle factories and plants on their hands.

"President Roosevelt has taken our idea in his idle factory plan," Sinclair said to The Post reporter at his Pasadena home. "I consider that the most important thing this Administration has done."

District Program Outlined.

The Sinclair political weekly, the Epic News, this week carries a banner headline: "Roosevelt Starts Epic Plan for United States." It recites the program for setting up of a self-sustaining relief program in the District of Columbia recently announced by Commissioner Allen.

The briefest statement of these features of the Epic plan is in Sinclair's own campaign textbook entitled "I, Governor of California and How I Ended Poverty," which the candidate calls a "true story of the future."

1. A legislative enactment for the establishment of State land colonies, whereby the unemployed may become self-sustaining and cease to be a burden upon the taxpayers. A public body, the California Authority for Land (the C. A. L.) will take the idle land and land sold for taxes and at forceclosure sales, and erect dormitories, kitchens, cafeterias and rooms for social purposes and cultivate the land, using modern machinery under the guidance of experts.

Production Authority Provided.

2. A public body entitled the California Authority for Production (the C. A. P.) will be authorized to acquire factories and production plants whereby the unemployed may produce the basic necessities required for themselves and for the land colonies, and to operate these factories and house and feed and care for the workers. C. A. L. and C. A. P. will maintain a distribution system for the exchange of each other's products. The industries will include laundries, bakeries, canneries, clothing and shoe factories, cement plants, brick yards, lumber yards, thus constituting a complete industrial system, a new and self-sustaining world for those whom our present system can no longer employ.
3. A public body entitled the California Authority for Money (the C. A. M.) will handle the financing of C. A. L. and C. A. P. This body will issue scrip to be paid to the workers and used in the exchanging of products within the system It will also issue bonds to cover purchases of land and factories, the erection of buildings and the purchase of machinery.

Since promulgating the Epic plan, Sinclair has modified it to the extent of laying emphasis, not on building new factories, but on renting existing idle equipment from private enterprise.

Competition Fear Allayed.

"Our plan won't compete with private markets," he said in the interview. "The unemployed are of no use to business now because they have no buying power. Public relief is the only source of purchasing power they have now, and that comes out of taxes. I estimate that one-fourth of our California population is dependent upon public charity.

"We could start out on a rental basis, and that method of beginning is coming more and more to the front in our movement. It would not require as large a bond issue and with so much idle equipment in the State there is no need for the State to build more. Use what we have. Let the State offer to rent such factories as it needs to make clothing and other articles for a period of three years at a price which will carry the overhead on the investment. That will enable concerns to get out of the red. We can retain the technical staffs and simply add the necessary additional number of employes to speed up the plants. If we are going to rent this machinery we would want to run it 18 hours a day, in three six-hour shifts, to get as much production as possible out of the investment.

"We can use California cotton for making dresses, shirts and other wearing apparel. We will pay the cotton growers in scrip which would be acceptable in payment for taxes.

Russian Errors Avoided.

"The more I think about the rental plan the better it seems because it would avoid the delay involved in building our own equipment, it would avoid the confusion we saw in Russia where experts were driven out and an entire new personnel had to be trained at great loss in product-efficiency. And it prevents expansion of plant equipment beyond needs of the consuming public."

From the Socialist point of view, this is a form of peaceful penetration of the capitalist system and the Sinclair group see it though they are denounced by the old-line Socialists as well as the Communists as traitors who would compromise with capitalism.

One of Sinclair's Socialist aids explains the strategy as follows: "This is a break with the past in Socialist strategy. Socialists have insisted the capitalist system had to die before Socialism could be established. Sinclair uses the idea of peaceful penetration of the capitalist order. The program is to set our plan for relief purposes first and then penetrate. We are starting on a regional plan. Socialists always insisted that the change had to be made on a National basis."

Von Hindenburg's Illness Is Held Not Especially Serious

Freystadt, esat Prussia, July 30 (AP).—THhe illness of President Paul Von Hindenburg, which brought brought a noted physician to his side yesterday, was described today by the bookkeeper at his summer estate as "not of an especially serious nature."

The president, it was revealed today after alarm had been felt for his condition, is suffering from his old disorder of the prostate gland and an unexplained ailment of the feet.

The 86-year-old head of the German nation, however, continues to maintain a keen interest in the affairs of his government and of the world.

Dr. Ferdinand Sauerbruch, of Zurich University, personal physician to the president, made a hurried trip to see him Sunday, but was stated by a member of the staff at the estate at Neudeck, near here, to regard the president's condition as not alarming.

Dr. Sauerburch remained at Neudeck this afternoon.

Chancellor Hitler had planned to visit Neudeck today, it was learned, but instead sent Herr Lammers, the state secretary of the vice chancellery.

The purpose of the visit apparently was to talk over the Austrain situation and the appointment of Vice Chancellor Von Papen as minister to Vienna.

Military officials said there was "quite a bit of stopping of trucks," but they blamed it upon a "bad element." The Drivers Union, No. 574, they said, was cooperating with the military in a "very fine way." Only five pickets were under arrest, but a more intensive campaign to stop their activity was promised.

The employers advisory committee, which indicated previously it would seek a test of the legality of Gov. Floyd Olson's proclamation last week of military rule, said it would claim Constitutional rights of private citizens to go about their daily occupations had been violated. Sam Levy, the committee's attorney, said he was not yet prepared to say when the test action would be filed.

Longshoremen Go Back to Jobs Today

San Francisco, July 30 (AP).—The Pacific Coast longshoremen's strike, which in its ramifications cost at least eight lives and upward of $200,000,000, besides causing the mass walkout of organized labor in the San Francisco Bay cities, passed into history today and companion strikes by seafaring men were ending rapidly.

With the 12,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association, who went on strike May 9, ready to return to work in all Pacifis Coast ports at 8 a. m. tomorrow, representatives of two other maritime groups notified President Roosevelt's mediation board they also would go back to their jobs.

The masters, mates and pilots, and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, in a letter to the board, declared their strike will end tomorrow.

The union representatives pledged full cooperation with the board during the period of adjustment while arbitration and collective bargaining negotiations are under way.

Four Mediators Work For Kohler Settlement

Kohler, Wis., July 30 (AP).—Four Federal mediators joined efforts today to terminate the strike at the Kohler Plumbing Co. plant, where disorders last week took two lives and injured 43 others.

Reinforced by Carl Steffenson, secretary of the Chicago Regional Labor Board, and D. M. Compton and Prof. William Spencer, board members, the Rev. J. W. Maguire began conferences with officials of the firm and of Federal Labor Union No. 18545.

Murder Trial Is Set Sept. 4

Two Held in Bladensburg Shooting May Plead in Marlboro.

The case of James Orlando and Joseph D'Alexandro, held on charges of murder in connection with the Bladensburg tea house shooting in 1931, will be tried Tuesday, September 4, it was announced yesterday.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie said that, although it was no definitely settled, it was expected that the case would be tried in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro.

The jury of the special session of the court was dismissed last week after sentencing several persons for murder. This included a death-by-hanging sentence for three colored bandits who have been referred to as the "Black Dillingers."

D'Alexandro was arrested recently in New York and Orlando in Philadelphia. Both are being held in the Marlboro jail, charged with the murder of Grover Amick, of Washington.

Two other men, James Wallace and James Zalenski, are already serving terms of 18 years each on second degree murder charges as a result of the shooting.

Itaian Naval Curb Sought by Britain

London, July 30 (AP).—Italy's plans to build two new 35,000-ton battleships were understood to have been discussed from technical standpoints at conferences today between British admiralty officials and Premier Mussolini's special emissary, Naval Capt. Raineri Biscia.

The British are understood to be desirous of inducing the Italians to abandon the plans for new battleships, regarding this as extremely important in dealing with the United States and other nations to reduce the tonnage of such craft at the 1935 conference.

Should the Italians persist in their plan, the British would consider it useless, it was understood, to attempt to interest American delegates in conferences in the autumn to accept a limitation of 25,000 tons for battleships.

A card of 17 races will be scheduled and this part of the program will be held in conjunction with the annual fair.

Mrs. Dall Gets Divorce; Court Doors Barred

Court Doors Locked.

She went immediately to the small Douglas County Court room, where the divorce trial was held behind locked doors.

Judge Guild, who opposes the Nevada law which provides that any principal in a divorce case may demand and receive a private trial, said he was closing the court doors "Out of deference to President Rooseveit."

Filing of the complaint and trial of the case required less than 25 minutes

A few minutes after Platt filed the suit, which charged "extreme cruelty in the words of the statute," the trial was under way.

Testifies to Residence.

Mrs. Dana, a New York social registerite now living in Nevada, appeared to testify that Mrs. Dall spent most of her six weeks' residence period at the Dana Arrowhead D ranch near Pyramid Lake, Nev.

After the trial, Mrs. Dall spent a few minutes conversing with Judge Guild, who last year granted a divorce to Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt from Elliott Roosevelt, Mrs. Dall's brother.

Then, on the arm of Charles Rich, Department of Justice operative, she hurried out of the building and into Platt's car.

Declining to answer any questions, she entered Platt's car, saying "let me drive."

Mrs. Dall took the wheel, and smiling broadly, drove it toward a cameraman.

Future Plans Guarded.

Then she drove away, calling "good-by" and waving to a small crowd that had gathered on the courthouse lawn.

Platt declined to disclose where Mrs. Dall expects to go from Nevada.

It was understood, however, she expected to leave within a short time for the East.

She will not meet her father, President Roosevelt, at Portland, when he arrives there from Honolulu, it was learned from a reliable source.

Anna Roosevelt and Curtis B. Dall were married June 5, 1926, in a fashionable church wedding at Hyde Park, N. Y.

They separated more than a year ago. Mr. Dall remained in New York. Mrs. Dall went to the White House in Washington to live with her parents.

Accompanied by her children, their maid and Department of Justice agents, Mrs. Dall came to Nevada in June to establish a divorce residence.

Walmsley Calls Long 'Mad Hatter and Lier'

New Orleans, July 30 (AP).—Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, returning from a vacation today, described his bitter political foe, Senator Huey P. Long, as a "Mad Hatter," and applied the term "Unqualified Lie" to a statement made by Long in political addresses during his absence.

He referred to a statement by Long Saturday night that peace overtures had been made, including a proposal that Walmsley would resign as Mayor of New Orleans if legislation long conceived, directed at the city was withdrawn in the recent assembly session.

NRA Decision On Mill Waits For Johnson

Action of Greif Case Also Delayed Until Recovery Chief Returns.

A decision on the possible second withdrawal of the Blue agle of the Harriman Hosiery Mills will be deferred until the return here late this week of Recovery Administrtor Johnson, NRA officials predicted yesterday.

A mass of data bearing on the case has been assembled for submission to the recovery chief, it was learned. Johnson is expected to announce his ruling soon after completion of his vacation in the West.

Meanwhile, action on announced plans of L. Greif and Brother, Inc., Baltimore clothing manufacturers, to use its large supply of Blue Eagle labels also was held in abeyance pending Johnson's return. NRA officials earlier revoked the Greif firm's eagle for alleged failure to meet code wage requirements.

The emblem of the Harriman mill, originally rescinded on the recommendation of the old National Labor Board, was restored ten days ago by A. R. Glancy, NRA division administrator.

Maj. George L. Berry, another NRA division administrator William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and members of the NRA Labor Advisory Board, bitterly criticized Glancy's settlement as unfair to organized labor.

Johnson telegraphed his Washington office Saturday ordering a second removal of the insignia unless the factory immediately reemployed 50 strikers and promised to bargain collectively with employes.

Glancy insisted the agreement he engineered conformed with the requirements stipulated by Johnson. Berry and Green, however, argued the mill had failed to make necessary concessions.

M. W. Walker, secretary of the mill, conferred with Glancy. He indicated he did not except any developments in the situation until the return of Johnson. T. Asbury Wright, mill general counsel, also was in Washington, but failed to visit NRA.

Thacher Flays NRA Coercion

Calls for Curb on Power Given Roosevelt and Johnson.

ew York, July 30 (AP).—The NRA as administered by Hugh S. Johnson was described tonight by Thomas D. Thacher, solcitor general in the Hoover Administration, as "abhorrent to the American sense of justice and fair play."

Speaking over a National radio hook-up in the Republican National Committee's political speech series, Thacher contended the great question to be determined in the next Congress was to what extent the policy of giving the President vast powers over agriculture and industry should be continued.

"The question will certainly be considered, and may well be decided by the new Congress," Thacher said. "Consequently, it should be the controlling issue in the Congressional election this fall.

"It involves the American system of government and rises far above the fortunes of candidates or of political parties. Knowledge of the new system and its effect upon individual men and women is necessary to intelligent discussion."

Under critical necessity in the past 17 months, he said, hasty legislative and executive action has been taken without "considered thought of the ultimate consequences of the action taken"

"Vast powers over finance, agriculture, industry and commerce," he said, "have been delegated to the President, who in turn has delegated these extraordinary powers to subordinate officials, and even to persons in private life, who are not under the duties and obligations imposed by statute upon those charged with official responsibility.

"Thorugh the exercise of such powers the individual pursuits of our people have been brought under bureaucratic regimentation and control."

Turning to the NRA, Thacher said the Government had employed the boycott to "coerce compliance with code provisions" and added:

"The net result of these and other coercive measures contained in the codes, in the absence of any adequate method of appeal to the courts, is to compel compliance regardless of loss or damage which may result * * *.

"That the Administration will not reform the NRA unless compelled to do so by vigorous opposition in Congress seems certain.

"No well-intentioned bueraucrat ever relinquished his power to decide an issue arising between the Government and one of its citizens * * *.

"It is for the people to say, in the coming elections, whether such powers shall be continued without restraint.

"Gen. Johnson calls the NRA self-government in business. Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, calls it bureaucracy in combination with monopoly. Call it what you will. As it is now administered, it is abhorrent to the American sense of justice and fair play."

Wanted to Wait in Jail for Wedding Day

Great Falls, Mont. (U.P.).—Alex Zwanetzck waxed indignant when the judge here proposed to sentence him to 30 days in jail on a vagrancy charge.

"I want 90 days, or nothing," the laborer demanded.

"My girl friend is doing 90 days in jail now. We're going to be married when she gets out. I haven't anything else to do, and I want to stay in jail 'till her time's up!"

The court granted Alex's request and he strode away to his cell.

District officials and business leaders, responding to an invitation issued by Commissioner George E. Allen, met yesterday in Mr. Allen's office to discuss means of providing more jobs for the unemployed. Among those attending the conference and shown above are C. J. Rush, Washington Real Estate Exchange; Ernest L. Daniel, former chairman of the District Employment Committee; Capt. H. F. Clark, deputy administrator in charge of work; W. C. Cleary; E. B. Young, acting director, public employment center; Miss Alice Hill, director, emergency relief; Luis J. Mancuso, L. A. Halbert, director of research, emergency relief; Thomas J. Veteran Popular Member of Diplomatic Set for Many Years.

Oriental art that remained until his death.

In 1901 he was transferred to London, where he remained for eight years, after which he was sent to Constantinople as counsel of legation. He returned to London two years later to fill the same post there, being promoted to the rank of minister and sent to Mexico in 1912. During his service in the Southern republic, Minister May witnessed a revolution.

Returns to London.

With the coming of the war he returned once more to London, and until 1917 performed the special mission of looking after Belgian refugees in England. Then came another trip to the Orient as minister to China, where he remained until 1920. He was minister to Sweden and Finland from 1920 to 1925. Ambassador to Brazil for the ensuing five years and then Ambassador to the United States, taking the post held formerly by Prince Paul de Ligne.

Ambassador May, a quiet, courteous man, was popular among the diplomats of the Capital. His eldest daughter, Francoise, made her debut in Washington and this spring was queen of the Apple Blossom Festival of the Shenandoah Valley. Alberta Elizabeth, who was named after the King and Queen of the Belgians, was born at the outbreak of the World War. The Ambassador was a fast friend of the late King Albert.

A few months ago Ambassador May was awarded the Grand Croix of the Order of the Crown of Belgium.

Hull Expresses Sympathy.

After he was notified of M. May's death Secretary of State Cordell Hull issued the following statement:

"I have been deeply shocked to learn of the tragic death of the Belgian Ambassador.

"Mr. May and I had become warm personal friends and I shall feel his loss personally as keenly as I shall officially. He had made a most distinguished place for himself in Washington and this Government mourns his passing."

Mr. Hull and Mr. May had been intimately associated since the former became Secretary of State and their official relations soon developed in a warm personal friendship. After issuing his formal statement the Secretary called at the Belgian Embassy at 9 o'clock last night personally to express his regret over the ambassador's death.

Indian Chief, Former Dry, Is Wet Now

Kansas City, Mo. (U.P.).—Chief Lone Chief, of Pawnee, Okla., one of the last full bloods of the Pawnee tribe, is an ardent wet, though once he was a strong supporter of the dry cause. Visiting Kansas City in full tribal regalia, the 72-year-old chief, who incidentally was a graduate of Carlisle, class of 1890, explained:

"Before prohibition it was illegal to give or sell Indians whisky. Since we were denied the right to drink intoxicants, we couldn't see why the white men should, so we were for prohibition."

The ban against selling wine and beer to Indians died with prohibition.

Hitch-Hiker Picked Wrong Driver for Ride

Gloucester, Mass. (U.P.).—The next time George W. Gleason hitch-hikes he will be more particular about his thumbing.

Hitch-hiking, he was picked up by a very pleasant motorist, he thought, until it was time to get out. Gleason, reaching his destination, told the driver that he guessed he'd get out, but the driver, being Chief Louis J. Boutchie, of Essex police, guessed he wouldn't.

Gleason was wanted in Gloucester for digging clams in a contaminated area and was taken to the police station where he was given a suspended sentence.

Allen Launches "Give a Job" Drive to Employ 25,000 Idle nothing more than that, it has been worth while," Commissioner Allen commented.

An executive committee will be appointed today to work out details of the campaign.

Cooperation was pledged by those attending but interjected criticism brought discussion down to detailed realities which were left to be worked out at later meetings.

Robert J. Cottrell, secretary of the Washington Board of Trade, and Sylvan King, of King's Palace department store, promised their cooperation and urged that the District Commissioners require employment of Washington workers and Washington-bought materials when letting contracts.

"That is fine," agreed Frank J. Coleman, representing the Central Labor Union, "but why don't Washington merchants practice that? They get their printing done in Baltimore and Richmond because it is cheaper while Washington printers walk the street without work."

Quota Called Too Small.

The employment figure was set at the 15,000 minimum because investigation has disclosed that 15,000 of the 20,000 on District relief rolls are able to work and have asked for jobs.

"If the employment campaign is limited to those on relief rolls it will defeat its purpose," R. T. Lansdale, of FERA said. "There are many others who are deserving and who want work but who have kept themselves off the relief rolls. If the job getting is limited to those on relief there will be a rush to get on the relief rolls."

The unemployment relief machinery has been doing nothing to get union men jobs, Mr. Locher charged, renewing his war with Capt. Howard F. Clark, assistant Engineer Commissioner, deputy administrator in charge of relief work.

"A union card is a detriment in getting a job," Mr. Locher said. "By paying 40 cents an hour to skilled workmen the relief jobs have beaten down the wage scales, for instance on renovizing work which is now so popular."

Clark and Locher Clash.

"There are not more than 500 out of the 15,000 employable on the relief rolls, who are skilled workmen and any building program or large employment project couldn't operate solely with the skilled men on relief," Capt. Clark retorted.

Another protest against employment of outside persons and materials by Washington organizations was voiced by Locher. He said the Salvation Army planning to construct a building which will cost $1,000,000, had originally intended to employ Washington architects and workmen, but has decided to employ a North Carolina architect, he said.

"I've written to the Salvation Army asking them to reconsider. I believe this committee ought to take up the matter," the labor leader said.

"While I'm on my feet I'm going to talk plain and name names. I was at the Donohue Motor Co. A big truck drove up loaded with baskets of laundry. The laundry was done in Baltimore because it was cheaper there. I asked the employes why they did that. They said they had no choice. The truck gathered and delivered laundry of a lot of Washington concerns."

Church Federation In.

Dr. W. L. Darby, secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, pledged cooperation of that organization, but suggested that it might be a mistake to start out with a goal of 15,000 employers. Others who attended the meeting were Elwood Street, director of public welfare, and Mrs. F. W. Biddle, first vice president, Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, second vice president, Federation of Citizens Associations; Charles J. Rush, executive secretary, Washington Real Estate Exchange; Ernest H. Daniels, William C. Cleary, general manager of works division; John Ihlder, Washington committee on housing; Frank Persons, director, United States Employment Service; Howard H. Burr, Lewis J. Mantusso, Leroy Halbert, director of research, emergency relief division; Miss M. Alice Hill, director of emergency relief; T. J. Groomes, District of Columbia Bankers Association; W. R. Schumacher, Merchants and Manufacturers Association; G. W. Beasley, president, Federation of Civic Associations; Dr. R. A. Fairley, Interdenominational Ministers Alliance; Dr. Francis E. Montgomery, representing Bishop McNamara; H. C. Corpening, District rehabilitation office; Thomas E. Lodge, first vice president, Federation of Citizens Associations.

in prison. He was also convicted of conspiring with Whitaker and is serving two additional years for that offense.

Brushing aside the technicalities raised by "The Fox," in his demand for a new tral, the Appellate Court said:

"The question before the jury was whether the defendants had conspired to steal $35,000 from Mrs. McLean by trickery, and their method of accomplishing this purpose was as material as the amount—indeed more so—but their plan of trickery tcuching this last item of $35,000 could not be shown to the jury without evidence of what had preceded it, which furnished the opportunity and occasion for the alleged conspiracy."

Appeal Is Rejected.

Dismissing Whitaker's contention that the prosecutor's address to the jurors was prejudicial and inflammatory, the court said:

"This contention of the appellant, like his exception to the evidence and to the charge of the court, draw whatever weight they have largely from the developments touching Mr. Means, which made any association with him undoubtedly embarrassing for any codefendant. But Whitaker's association with Means was voluntary, for better or for worse, and the duty of the judge and jury was to decide whether so much of such association as was covered by this indictment and this evidence constituted a criminal conspiracy. This they did, and the legal situation was not changed because one of the alleged conspirators, before the conspiracy began, had already swindled Mrs. McLean out of $104,000 by a trick so connected with the alleged trick of the conspiracy as to be inseparable therefrom."

Alabama's "Near-Beer" Tax Revenue Fizzles

Montgomery, Ala. (U.P.). — "Near beer" taxes have contributed exactly $3.18 to the coffers of this bone-dry State during the past two years, after exponents had predicted $500,000 annual revenue from it.

The three dollars was a bona fide sale, while the 19 cents represented the purchase of a stamp collector last April.

First Infantry May Surpass '33 Rifle Mark

Guard Regiment Begins Week of Strenuous Field Training.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 30.—Preliminary reports on the range work of the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, in camp here, indicate that the regiment will surpass last year's record, which won the title of the best shooting regiment in the National Guard of the United States. The score cards have not been tabulated completely yet.

Freed from range work, the regiment began a week of strenuous field work, which will include gas and riot duty training, under supervision of Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, of Silver Spring, gas officer, and Capt. William Tydings, U. S. A., regular Army instructor in gas operations.

The Second Battalion, commanded by Maj. Harry E. Flook, of Cumberland, and the Service Company of Silver Spring, were given gas defense training today. The men were taught use of the gas mask and marched through a screen of tear gas.

Demonstration Fired.

A special demonstration squad made up of noncommissioned officers fired a three-course demonstration on the 200-yard range. Each course consisted of five rounds with a minute's time allowance. The first course was fired at silhouette targets under normal conditions; the second with a smoke screen in front of the targets, and the third while wearing gas masks and firing under a concentration of smoke and tear gas.

The Third Battalion, commanded by Maj. Stephen P. Fuller, of Crisfield, fired combat problems, in which Company I, of Annapolis, fired a demonstration problem under observation of the entire Third Battalion.

The Trench Mortar Platoon, of Howitzer Company of Kensington, commanded by Louis Michael C. C. Pugh, fired a demonstration problem on a machine gun nest in connection with the machine gun problem.

Company I, of Salisbury, won the baseball championship of the Third Battalion this afternoon when it defeated the Medical Detachment team, 23 to 1.

First Battalion Maneuvers.

The Frst Battalion, commanded by Maj. Einfield B. Howard, of Bel-Air, engaged in its annual field maneuver around Sabillasville as a preliminary for the regimental problem which will be carried out Thursday night and Friday morning.

The Second aBttalion will have its field maneuver tomorrow, the First Battalion will be on combat range, and the Third will have gas training.

Results in the regimental shooting matches were announced today by Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, executive officer.

Capture of the American Legion trophy by Company F of Hyattsville previously had been announce ville previously had been announced. Company F was announced as winner of the Baird match with a score of 370. Team members are Lieut. S. L. Crosthwait, Sergts. N. H. Spicknall, W. L. Spicknall and W. G. Thomas.

Labor Rulings Challenged by Coach Concern

Two Steel Mills Reopen in Few Days After Long Dispute.

Labor Developments.

Other developments here yesterday were:

The Republic Steel Corporation, through the National Labor Relations Board, announced it would reopen its plants at Warren and Niles, Ohio, following approval of a wage agreement with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers.

The board said it had directed, in its first decision handed down, the Lyndhurst Bus Co. of Jersey City to reinstate two discharged employes or to be cited to enforcement agencies on August 6.

The board expected to open the case of the Chicago Motor Coach Co. today.

In a letter to the agency, Ritchie took the position that there is no dispute between the company and its employes.

"Your assumption of jurisdiction in a matter where no controversy existed or exists and your 'decision' over our direct protest violate every principle of mediation, conciliation and arbitration, and are unwarranted. Your board has no jurisdiction with respect to these matters and things referred to in your 'decision' and this lack of jurisdiction is conclusive of the matter."

Ignores Board Orders.

Counsel for the company said yesterday its executives had refused to obey the order of the old National Labor Board to reinstate the discharged workers and had not changed their positions.

The challenge was the first hurdle placed in the path of the Labor Relations Board created by Congress, kith a view of keeping relations between capital and labor on an even keel as the Administration drove its recovery program forward.

Thus far the board has limited its activities to alleged violations by industry of section 7a of the National industrial recovery act, which guarantees labor the right to select representatives of its own choosing to bargain collectively with employers.

The reopening of the Republic steel plants follows conferences covering two days last week between Republic and Amalgamated representatives with the steel board acting as mediator on its own invitation.

Previously, the Republic Steel Corporation had refused to renew its union contracts with employes following their expiration on June 30.

The union lodge at a third Republic plant at Moline, Ill., is expected to approve the general agreement reached at Washington, and to pave the way for reopening of this plant within a few days.

Prison Tense As Sterilization Fight Starts

Third Termer Volunteers to Test Legality of Oklahoma Law.

McAlester, Okla., July 30 (AP).—Oklahoma's State law for sterilization of habitual criminals was started toward a court test today.

With George W. Winkler, 29-year-old third termer as the volunteer subject, the State board of affairs opened the first hearing at State's prison here.

The prison atmosphere was tense. There are 582 third termers here. Under the law, they would be liable to sterilization when liberated after a valid finding that they are likely to become public charges and that their offspring might follow in their footsteps.

Winkler, flanked by a committee of convicts and represented by three attorneys, declared that he is against the law, although he volunteered for the test case.

"Just because I'm a third termer is no reason I'm not competent to rear a family," he declared.

He denied reports that he and his wife of three years are divorced. They have no children.

Laying the groundwork for an appeal to the district court, chairman W. C. Hughes of the board overruled a dual objection of State Senator Claude Briggs, of the defense.

Briggs contended the sterilization statute is unconstitutional because "it subjects a prisoner to cruel and unusual punishment" and because it allegedly violates the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution.

Farley Sells First Of Park Stamps

Yellowstone Park, Wyo., July 30 (AP).—Stepping into the temporary roll of postal clerk, Postmaster General James A. Farley today inaugurated the sale of a special issue of National Park stamps here.

The initial block of stamps, bearing a likeness of Old Faithful geyser, was sold by the Postmaster General to Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Cheyenne, Wyo., who in turn presented the first stamp to W. H. Jackson, 91, the first photographer ever to take a picture of Old Faithful while with the historic Hayden survey in 1871.

Camp Food Poisons 77 West Virginia Tropoers

They are Wiley Meade, Harry Millum, John E. Moricle, S. G. Willis, Albert H. Smith, Harry C. Williams and D. C. Arney, all of Bluefield. They were taken last night from a troop train en route from camp.

Radio Waves and Ripples

DOWN on the Antarctic icecap for the duration of the summer the Byrd expedition boys are getting homesick. Talking to themselves, probably, and dreaming sadly of Times Square and steaming crowds. And thinking of how good it would feel to be able to take a bath, say, once a month.

For when Columbia asked the boys what they would like to hear on their next radio program, back popped the following requests in this order of preference.

1. Sound of a man taking a shower bath.

2. Voice of a man ordering a seven-course dinner, with staccato cocktail-making noises in the background.

3. Traffic noises from the Nation's busiest intersection.

4. Locomotive gathering steam for a long pull out into burning West.

To us it looks like a perfect formula for self-torture, particularly the bath-taking. Cliff Edwards (Ukulele Ike) has volunteered to make the supreme sacrifice, moving his bath night from Saturday to Wednesday just for the boys at the Antarctic, and agreeing, what's more, to sing, for the very last time, that well-worn ballad of Marble Hall, "Singing in the Rain."

As a matter of fact, the Byrd boys' nostalgia is causing Columbia not a little inconvenience. In addition to providing Cliff Edwards with a bath, sometime between 9 and 9:30 p. m.—the period of the broadcast—someone has to catch a locomotive making authentic pulling-out-of-the-station noises. No sound effects record stuff on the network, you know. It has to be real.

The name of the man who will order the seven course dinner is being withheld as a matter of policy. You never can tell when a couple of Communists are going to be listening in.

"No type of entertainment in the world brings so strange and varied audience response as radio. For instance, on our show (Maria's Matinee), we feature a jelly making spot—dramatizing step by step, the complete modern method of making jellies and jams quickly. This spot is what makes it possible for us to give the housewives of America songs by Lanny Ross, Conrad Thibault, Muriel Wilson and others."—Irene Hibbard.

Exactly.

Big Air Force For British Is Baldwin Plea

Churchill Tells Commons Berlin's Strength Is on Increase.

London, July 30 (AP).—The possibility of German rearmament in the air was emphasized in the House of Commons today by Stanley Baldwin, acting prime minister, in a strong plea for the British government's program of air force expansion.

Following Baldwin's revelation of concern over the German plan, Winston Churchill, Conservative member, charged that Germany "in violation of the peace treaty has created a military air force now nearly two-thirds as strong as our own home defense force." He added that she is increasing her force.

Baldwin expressed the belief that Germany intends a big expansion of her air armaments if she obtains the right or "seizes the right to rearm."

Grave Situation Seen.

"She has every argument in her favor from her defenseless position in the air to try to make herself secure," Baldwin said. "There is a situation of potential gravity which it would be idle and foolish to ignore."

Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal, asserted that the "present regime in Germany is one which involves danger to Europe," but chided Baldwin for failure to push disarmament further at Geneva.

"Apparently the government is letting go its hold and throwing the reins on the horses' neck, letting them go where they will," he declared.

"They are the horses of war, pestilence, famine and death—the four horses of the Apocalypse that now are careening over Europe.

Statesmen Are Blamed.

"The British nation views this situation with resentment and anger and will not forgive those statesmen who brought it about."

Baldwin had told the House, "If we do not act we may find ourselves later on in terrible jeopardy."

"We have time to spare to put our defenses in order," he said. "There is no cause for panic of any kind. There is, so far as I see it, no risk in the immediate future of peace being broken. It may be that peace will not be broken.

"The ultimate security of Europe may some day be found in collective security, but for myself, I am very nervous about accepting obligations if I have not the means in my hands to carry those obligations out."

Other Nations Build Planes.

Explaining that the program of the government calls for expansion of the air force over a five-year period from 844 planes to 1,304, Baldwin spoke of the activities in other nations.

France and Italy, he said, are reorganizing their air forces, and the United States has added 240 planes in the last four years, as well as approving the addition of 1,184 to the naval service.

Russia, he continued, is making considerable increase in its air arm and Germany's intention, he said, could be seen from speeches in that country and from the secrecy maintained regarding the manufacture of aircraft and the preparation of airports.

Hanging in Effigy Witness Is Silent

Kentucky Court Meets Another Refusal.

Danville, Ky., July 30 (AP). — Another witness in the hanging in effigy case refused late today to tell Police Judge Jay W. Harlan what he knew about certain phases of it, while Jack Durham and Wesley Carty, reporters, went back to jail for the sixth consecutive time rather than break a newspaper confidence.

The latest refusal came from Victor Bodner, a University of Alabama medical student, who has been clerking in a grocery store here during vacations. He attended the inquiry accompanied by counsel and refused to answer questions about the placard that was fastened to the effigy of Representative J. Sterling Towles, which was suspended in the courthouse yard here July 19 in protest over Towles' vote for the State sales tax.

Judge Harlan gave young Bodner until Wednesday to think over his refusal, and sentenced Carty and Durham to serve six hours each in jail tonight.

2 Gold Companies' Statements Halted

Trade Commission Refers One Case to Justice.

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday that it had issued stop orders indefiniately suspending the registration statement of two Western gold mining companies which were filed under the 1933 securities act. One case has been turned over to the Department of Justice for possible criminal proceedings.

The stop orders were issued against the Abba Gold Mining Corporation, of Carson City, Nev., and Cariboo King Gold, Inc., of Seattle, Wash. The Abba Corporation case was turned over to the Justice Department.

In both orders the commission held that the registration statements included "untrue statements of material facts" or omitted to state "certain material facts required to be stated" so as to prevent the statements from being misleading.

Whenever you hear anyone mention the "Result Number," he is talking about Post Classified Ads—National 4200.

Ickes' Warning Speeds Work On PWA Jobs

Many Projects Facing Loss of U. S. Funds Are Started.

Tardy Public Works projects, threatened by withdrawal of Federal grants and loans, are rapidly getting under way as the result of a warning issued by Administrator Ickes just before leaving on his vacation, the Public Works Administration announced yesterday.

A total of 181 of the 563 non-Federal projects have started, it was said, while 15 of the lone grants have been rescinded because construction was too slow in beginning. Extensions have been granted in some cases where reasonable excuses for delay have been offered, the PWA statement said.

The PWA forces now concentrating on the recipients of the remaining 367 non-Federal allotments so that the benefits of the employment may be felt before cold weather forces a seasonal delay.

"Justifiable reasons have been responsible for most of the delays," the PWA statement said. "Among these reasons are preparation fo plans, holding of elections to authorize issuance of bonds, selection of sites, requirement of court decisions, ratification of official acts, compliance with local regulatons, &c."

Allotments totaling $158,558,517 were affected by Ickes' warning, it was said. The PWA check-up showed that bids had ben advertised in 107 cases, contracts have been awarded in 41 cases, involving allotments of $9,851,500, while construction is in progress on 31 projects which received allotments of $5,536,250.

The total of the 15 rescinded allotments was $2,061,700.

King George's Naval Aid Named Admiral of Fleet

London, July 30 (AP).—Admiral Sir Reginald Yorke Tyrwhitt, first and principal naval aid to the King, today was appointed an admiral of the fleet in succession to Sir Oscar Brock, who will retire at the age of 65.

Sir Reginald commanded the destroyer flotillas in the 1914 action off Heligoland Bight and the 1915 fight off Dogger Bank.

Dr. Pitkin Runs Model Farm

Plans to Establish Management Areas in South in Addition to Eastern Shore Venture; Canning Plant Erected.

Centerville, Md., July 30 (Spl.).—With soil above the average and capable of yielding a large variety of crops and within eight hours' trucking distance of 15,000,000 consumers, a model farm of 678 acres is being conducted by Dr. Walter B. Pitkin, Columbia University professor and author of "Life Begins at Forty" and other books.

Beginning experimental operations a year ago, Prof. Pitkin, with Horace S. Diller, an experienced agriculturist on a large scale, hopes to begin cultivation of a tract of 7,500 acres, under contract on the managerial plan, and to add to these acres before the close of the summer. David and Richard Pitkin, sons of the writer, are associated with the plan.

A friend of Rexford Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, Dr. Pitkin does not agree with the crop-reduction plan now being worked out nationally. "The Administration," he said recently, "should have picked out submarginal areas and refuse any aid until farmers were out of them. I mean those areas where transportation, surpluses and costs prohibit a profit. Farms must move into the shadows of the city to make money."

Dr. Pitkin and Mr. Diller hope later to establish other management areas in Florida and North Carolina so that manpower and machinery may be used to advantage when not in use in off seasons on the Eastern Shore. They hope to build up a fleet of refrigerated barges for cheap water transportation from the Shore to Baltimore, Washington, New York and other ports. A pier has been in contemplation here and will be built next year, they say.

A canning factory has been completed on the model farm here for the canning of produce that can not be marketed satisfactorily. Surplus cabbages are being turned into sauerkraut now.

'Phantom' Suspect Balks Questioners

Steubenville, Ohio, July 30 (AP).—Ringed by inquisitors, a 49-year-old World War veteran, suspected as the "phantom gunman" of a series of strange killings in a Steubenville steel mill, late today continued to meet questions with sullen denial.

During the grilling the suspect, David Dascanio, alias Dasco, a mill worker, declared, "if I don't talk I live. If I talk I die."

That was as close as officials came to wringing from him any explanation of his possession of a revolver, which ballistic experts say was the weapon used in the assassination of three men and the wounding of another.

Dignified Peasantry Is Held Vital to U. S.

Kansas City, July 30 (AP).—The United States must adopt a form of "dignified peasantry" or continue feeding a large percentage of its people from baskets, Solomon S. Huebner, professor of the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, at Philadelphia, said here today.

Speaking before a group of insurance agents he said: "The trouble with the country is that people have piled up in the cities, with the result that we have millions of families living on the very edge of starvation."

Stratosphere Baw Loss Is Set At Half Million

Hardships and Finances Went for Naugt, Say Official Probers.

Holdrege, Nebr., July 30 (AP).—All money spent and the hardships endured by three U. S. Army airmen in the most pretentious venture into the stratosphere probably have gone for naught, it was said today by officials in charge of the expedition.

The world's largest balloon, "The Exporer," failed to reach a new altiture record on its 300-mile drift before it plopped into a cornfield 12 miles northwest of her. Ill its precious instruments were smashed except a valuable spectrograph which floated safely to earth on a parachute.

The airmen, Maj. William Kepner, Capt. Albert W. Stevens, scientific observer, and Capt. Orvil Anderson, made safe landings with parachutes as the big gondola plunged earthward.

$500,000 Was Spent.

Approximately half a million dollars was spent on the stratosphere venture in the hope of traveling to new heights with the precious instruments and bringing back valuable information for science. The instruments, except for the spectrograph, which was sent to the University of Rochester for examination, were destroyed and the money is gone. A delicate barograph, badly crushed when the gondola smashed like an egg, was sent to Washington to be examined, but the airmen held little hope that would give any recordings.

As an investigation of the crash adjourned to be resumed later in Washington, the scientists discussed the possibility of another stratosphere venture, probably next May or June. Meanwhile, the National Geographic Society announced that it had insurance policies covering the baloon and its valuable cargo. This might make possible another venture, but the expensive apparatus must be reconstructed by scientists. It will be difficult to duplicate some of the instruments and insurance may fall far short of covering the actual loss.

Probe Comes to D. C.

The three-man investigating board, which started its inquiry at Kearney, Nebr., 38 miles north of here yesterday, adjourned, ordered the wreckage taken to Washington on an Army truck and announced it would reconvene there soon to complete its work. Accompanied by Capt. Stevens, the trio, Dr. Lyman Briggs, of the Bureau of Standards; Dr. W. F. G. Swann, of Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, and Thomas W. McKnew, assistant secretary of the Geographic Society, boarded an East-bound airliner at Grand Island for the trip East.

Maj. Kepner and Capt. Anderson left by automobile for Rapid City, S. Dak., where the flight started last Saturday morning.

4,000 Cheer as Secretary Calls AAA Critics "Old Dealers."

Ruston, La., July 30 (AP).—Secretary Wallace today attacked the Republican critics of the AAA and said the "New Deal" had returned twice as much to Southern farmers in 1933 as the return of the "Old Deal" in 1932.

Some 4,000 Louisiana farmers cheered statements that the crop-control activities would be continued, and interrupted him with prolonged applause when he referred to President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Wallace, a former Republican, attacked the Republicans as what he termed "Old Dealers," and charged them with attempting to use the drought as an excuse for abandonment of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's policies.

"This effort to use the fact of the drought as an attack on the agricultural adjustment program is typical of the short-sighted leadership of the Republican party from 1921 to 1932," he said.

"They refused to do anything to take this into account either by appropriate changes in tariff policy or by giving farmers centralizing power of government with which to retire gradually the acres producing stuffs for a market which no longer existed. * * *

"The battle cry of the Old Dealers seems to be 'Pile up the surpluses again, but hold the tariff at a point which will make it impossible to dispose of the surplus on the world market.'

"Undoubtedly, the drought in the Far West and Middle West will make it necessary to change many of the agricultural programs for 1935. * * * Fortunately, the agricultural adjustment act is adjustable. * * * It may be that certain acreage-control programs will not be necessary at all in 1935, but with ordinary weather, the surpluses will be such that it will be again necessary to launch on a Government loan campaign hooked up with acreage control for 1936."

Purnell Tells Goldsborough He Can't Win

Quit Maryland Race and Save Humiliation, Aid of Rival "Advises."

Baltimore, July 30 (Spl.).—To avoid a "humiliating defeat" in the Maryland gubernatorial primary election, Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough should withdraw from the race, he was told today in a public statement issuing from the rival gubernatorial camp of H. Webster Smith.

The statement, drawn up by William C. Purnell, Baltimore Republican leader, referred to the many years that Senator Goldsborough has held public office and asserted the voters of the State are as tired of his long continuance in office as they are of Gov. Ritchie.

"The Republican party has bestowed more honors upon Senator Goldsborough during the last 40 years than upon any other member of that party in Maryland," Purnell's statement said.

"To such an extent has this been true that he has held lucrative public office for almost 40 years. With the exception of about 12 years, he appears to have been on the public pay roll continuously since he was 21 years old.

Labeled "Opportunist."

"I believe that as soon as the Senator arrives at a realization of the opposition to his candidacy, he will appreciate the fact there is not now an occasion for the political opportunist and he will withdraw from the contest. In this manner he will avoid a defeat that could only be humiliating to him after his numerous successes and at this late stage of his career."

Senator Goldsborough is on the lower Eastern Shore, along with several of the other seven gubernatorial candidates of both parties, and has not yet replied to the statement.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, replied to persistent reports that he would withdraw from the race in favor of Gov. Ritchie, fifth term candidate, by saying that he has filed his candidacy and has not yet abandoned the campaign.

Three File for Congress.

Annapolis, Md., July 30 (Spl.).—Three aspirants for Congress today filed certificates of candidacy with the Secretary of State at Annapolis, subject to the September primaries.

Representative T. Allan Goldsborough, Democrat, of Denton, would succeed himself from the Second district. Theodore F. Brown, Republican, of Westminster, and Raymond E. Cutino, Democrat, of Woodcock, filed from the Second district. William P. Cole, jr., Democrat, of Towson, is the incumbent from that district.

Smith Tours Allegany, Visiting Mining Area

Cumberland, Md., July 30 (Spl.).—H. Webster Smith, Baltimore, one of the leading candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, has concluded a tour of Allegany County, having held meetings in Cumberland and points in the Georges Creek mining region where the heavy Republican vote of the county is polled.

He was accompanied by Dr. Joseph I. Frantz, candidate for United States Senator, and Col. George Henderson, former State commander of the American Legion, candidate for attorney general.

There is much speculation as to whether Henderson, formerly of Cumberland, can swing the county for his running mates. The county organization is said to favor Harry W. Nice for the governorship. Nice was born at Barton, when his father was pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church there, and spent his early youth in the county.

Some of Col. Henderson's friends believe he might have had easier sailing had he campaigned independently of other candidates.

Banking Permit Battle Opened

Richmond, July 30 (AP).—Asserting that four banks, two of them under "interlocking directorate," do not afford Newport News adequate banking accommodations, the Industrial Loan & Investment Corporation of that city today offered testimony to the corporation commission to show it should be allowed to do a banking business.

The action, seeking a certificate of authority under acts of 1934 providing for conversion of industrial loan companies into banks of deposit and discount, was opposed by two other banks in the first contest before the commission under the 1928 law giving it jurisdiction over opening of new banks.

Witnesses said one of the four banks in Newport News was a colored institution, another the Morris Plan Bank, and the other two, the First National Bank and the Citizens, Marine, Jefferson Bank, were controlled by an interlocking directorate.

W. B. Colonna, an attorney, in his testimony said: "L. U. Noland (president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce), was the power behind the throne" of the First National and the Citizens, Marine, Jefferson.

Charles C. Berkeley, counsel for the applicant company, opened the hearing with a motion for a certificate of authority as a matter of right, in view of commission records.

Maj. Kent Wins Fight to Evade Lindbergh Law

Prisoner Surrendered to Botetourt County as Woman's Killer.

Roanoke, Va., July 30 (AP).—A Federal warrant containing charges brought against Maj. Robert C. Kent, jr., under the Lindbergh kidnaping law in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings, 51, operator of the Blue Ridge Springs Hotel, whose body was found in Pennsylvania, was dismissed when the preliminary hearing was called today.

The motion to dismiss was made by Joseph H. Chitwood, United States district attorney, and the prisoner was immediately surrendered to officers from Botetourt County, where Kent faces two indictments charging him with kidnaping and murdering Mrs. Hastings.

After a brief conference with his attorney, S. R. Price, and his uncle, W. P. Kent, of Washington, the former Army officer was taken to the Botetourt County Jail.

While a removal order was being obtained from Judge Ben Haden to transfer the prisoner back to the Roanoke jail "for safekeeping," Kent was taken to a barber shop and then to a restaurant and then to the county jail, where he was held about 15 minutes. He was back in the Roanoke Jail, where he was brought June 30, this afternoon.

Kent appeared in excellent spirits as he was led into the Federal courtroom by United States Marshal John W. Stuart, and took a seat between his attorney and his uncle.

Family Fights Home Ouster

Court Ruling Appealed by Maryland Folk to High Tribunal.

Frederick, Md., July 30 (Spl.).—Seeking to retain possession of the White House Inn near Braddock Heights, which the circuit court has ordered them to deliver to purchasers, Robert M. H. Lease and wife and their son, Harry M. Lease, today filed notice of an appeal to the Court of Appeals of Maryland.

The litigation began April 26. The Lease family was mortgagers. The property was sold at a mortgagees' sale to Walter S. Graham and wife, of Baltimore, who held the mortgage for $3,850.

A week after the sale, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lease and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lease, the last named having since died, filed exceptions to the report of sale. They stated that while they were unable to pay the mortgage they were seeking help from the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and that an agreement existed between themselves and the mortgagees, Mr. and Mrs. Graham, whereby the mortgagees would not foreclose if the HOLC aided the Lease family.

After the sale, the Lease family asserted that they had cause to believe they might have obtained aid from the Home Owners Loan Corporation, if the mortgagees had not insisted on selling the property. They asked that the court refuse to ratify the report of sale. Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard overruled the exceptions.

When the Lease family refused to vacate the premises, an order was passed by Chief Judge Hammond Urner that the occupants deliver the premises to Mr. and Mrs. Graham.

Oil Worker Rescued From Hanging May Die

Infuriated when his wife intervened, he fled to the top of a hill and hanged himself from a tree. He was cut down and rushed to a hospital, where he remains unconscious.

Hancock Valley Swept by Mild Flu Outbreak

Cases Also Reported in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Hagerstown, Md., July 30 (Spl.).—An influenza outbreak has been spreading through the Hancock Valley since last Friday and hundreds are ill with the malady, rare at this season of the year, Dr. W. Ross Cameron, Washington County health officer, announced today.

The outbreak has been of a mild type. While every precaution is being taken, it has already spread into West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Dr. Cameron said he had been informed the outbreak was even more widespread in Morgan County, W. Va., and also had reached Franklin and Fulton Counties in Pennsylvania. First indications that some kind of a contagious malady was sweeping the Hancock area came from physicians there Friday night and the health department immediately went to work. In some homes entire families were stricken.

The large orchards have been particularly hard hit as a result of the outbreak, in some cases as many as 50 per cent of the workers being ill. When a health officer found a case in the transient camp at Pearre, he immediately ordered the movement of transients from either the camp or from here stopped.

The outbreak appears to be worse in the rural sections surrounding Hancock, there being but few cases thus far in the town.

S. L. Ferguson, Virginia State Senator, Dead

Appomattox Courthouse, Va., July 30 (AP).—State Senator Samuel Lewis Ferguson, 65, long prominent in Virginia politics, died unexpectedly in his office here today from an attack of angina pectoris.

Funeral services will be held here tomorrow, with burial here.

Senator Ferguson was a recognized Democratic leader in this part of the State and had served on many important committees during his Senate tenure which had been continuous since 1919.

The upper house of the General Assembly will be represented at his funeral by a committee, named this afternoon by Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, who will himself attend.

Those on the committee are Senator W. A. Garrett, of Ridgeway; Saxson Holt, of Newport News; J. Belmont Woodson, of Nelson County; Charles E. Burks, of Lynchburg, and William M. Tuck, of Halifax.

Other State officials planning to attend the funeral are Peter Saunders, secretary of the Commonwealth; E. R. Combs, State comptroller; O. Victor Hanger, Senate clerk, and John Jeter, assistant Senate clerk.

United States Senator Harry Flood Byrd, whose uncle, Hal D. Flood was long a law partner of Senator Ferguson, said:

"The sudden death of my dear friend, Sam Ferguson, has grieved me deeply. I have never known a finer character. His chief pleasure in life was to help others less fortunate than himself. His great influence in public affairs was always exerted for the moral and material advancement of the people of Virginia. Only those of us so fortunate as to know him intimately can adequately appraise his great contributions to the welfare of the State. I was proud to be numbered among his intimate friends. No man in Virginia will be more universally mourned as no man was more beloved by people in all walks of life.

Liabilities in 1933-34 bankruptcies amounted to $9,586,819.14, as compared to $11,567,438.12 for the previous year. Only $568,066.01 in assets were realized from bankruptcy estates for creditors.

Century-Old Table Given to Kenmore By Overseer's Kin

Fredericksburg, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—Manufactured 100 years ago by George W. Proctor, son of George Washington's wagon driver during the Revolutionary War, a unique "tip top" table has been received at Kenmore, colonial home of Betty Washington Lewis, sister of the first President.

Proctor served for many years as overseer at Kenmore. The table is a gift of a descendant of its maker, Miss Lou Proctor, of Fredericksburg.

The table was made from trees grown on the Kenmore estate, then an 800-acre plantation. It consists of a hand-dressed top hinged to a one-piece, three-legged base, resembling an inverted three-pronged fork.

Miss Proctor's donation will be used to serve gingerbread, samples of which are given to all visitors to Kenmore, and which is made according to the recipe used by Washington's mother.

Walking 200 Miles at 83

"Grandma" Brock, on Her Way Across the Cumberland Mountains to Girlhood Home, Will Spurn Lift in "Devil's Wagons."

Big Laurel, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—Aggie Brock, 83, of Guest River, has sold her house, traded her mail box to Jesse Brock, a grandson, ceased housekeeping, and started on a visit she has been planning and postponing since her husband, Ephriam Brock, died 21 years ago.

"Grandma" Brock, as everybody calls her, has a long hot road ahead of her, too, for she is on her way across the Cumberland Mountains to visit her birthplace and any kin she may find living in Leslie County, Ky., 200 miles away. And she says she will walk every step of the way.

"Wouldn't you accept a ride in an automobile, if some one offered you a lift?" she was asked. "No sirree, I would not," she replied. "Think you would get me in one of them devil's wagons?"

Aggie Brock was born a Caldwell. Her father and mother were married late in life. She was born when her mother was 57 years old. Her father died when he was in his late seventies, but her mother was spry until she was 112 and lived to be 116.

"Grandma" married Eph Brock, of Harlan County, Ky., when she was 15 and came with him to make a home of her own out of the wild country of Wise County, Va. She has never been back to her girlhood home; never has seen any of her people or heard directly from them, except a brother who visited her once about 45 years ago.

"Guess I'll not find many of my folks alive when I get there," she said as she started in the long journey. "Guess they won't know me, if they are living—but I'm going just the same."

Charlottesville School Wins Highest Award in Contest

HOWALD BAILEY.

Charlottesville, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—The highest honor award of the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League for 1933-34 was won by Lane High School of Charlottesville, over Jefferson High School of Roanoke, in a close race for high point score decided by results of contests conducted among student publications, announced today.

The annual award is made to the State high school scoring the largest point total in various literary and athletic contests held during the school session under the direction of the league. The Charlottesville school won the Class B high school newspaper contest and the highest State championship award with a total of 20½ points for the year.

Two Tie for Third.

By failing to gain additional points in the judging of student newspapers, annuals and magazines, the Roanoke school finished second with 19 points. A tie for third place rests between John Marshall High School of Richmond, and E. C. Glass High School of Lynchburg, with 15 points each.

In announcing the individual winners, Charles H. Kauffman, executive secretary of the high school association, a division of the extension department of the University of Virginia, said the judges were particularly impressed with the increasing improvement noted in the literary efforts of Virginia high school students. The Lane High School student weekly, the contest winner edited by Howard Bailey, was especially given high praise.

John Marshall High School achieved the remarkable record of winning Class A and State championships in all three of the final contests by submitting the best newspaper, annual and magazine entries.

Honorable mention for newspapers in the Class A division went to George Washington High School, of Danville. The points Lane High School received in winning the Class B title enabled it to gain the league's highest award. Dayton High School won the Class C award.

Maury High School, of Norfolk, won honorable mention in the Class A annual contest. Robert E. Lee High School, of Staunton, won the Class B title, and Handley High School, of Winchester, received honorable mention. Eaglerock High School's entry won the Class C award, with Troutville High School winning honorable mention.

E. C. Glass High School placed second to John Marshall in winning honorable mention in the magazine contest. Harrisonburg High School was awarded the Class B title, honorable mention going to Lane High School.

Fiddles Tuned For White Top Folk Festival

Hundreds to Take Part in Two-Day Event Near Marion, Va.

Marion, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—Folk musicians from Virginia and several other States are tuning their fiddles and banjos and singing old-time songs and ballads in preparation for the White Top folk festival on White Top Mountain, near Marion, August 17 and 18.

Organized in 1931 by Mrs. Annabel Morris Buchanan, of Marion, and John Blackmore, of Abingdon, 20,000 people attended the festival last year. The event has received international recognition through its unusual features, high quality of folk music and the interest of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

On the mountain top, nearly 6,000 feet high, with a magnificent panorama extending into five States, hundreds of folk musicians gather each year to renew old customs, dance traditional figures and sing and play the ballads and tunes brought to America with the first settlers.

In addition to musicians from five States of the White Top region, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina and Tennessee, contestants are registering from Pennsylvania. A number of fiddlers 80 and 90 years old are planning to enter the contests.

From Virginia, Lloyd Fitzgerald, of Royal Orchard, will sing "O Rise, O Rise." John Morris, of Rockingham County, fiddler, will play "Johnny Ankydown," and Emory Stroop, of Harrisonburg, will play "Billy in the Low Ground," "Devil in the Woodpile," and other ancient tunes. All three were winners on the folk program of the recent Massanetta festival near Harrisonburg.

J. B. Chisholm, of Albemarle County, with his sister, "Aunt Betty," will be heard in fiddle duets such as "Haste to the Wedding." John M. Hunt, of Marion, retired sailor, will sing "Santy Anna," which made such a hit with President Roosevelt in the White House program that he asked for a copy. C. B. Wohlford, of Marion, champion banjoist, who also took part in the same program, and Horton Barker, blind singer of Chilhowie, who was invited to participate, will be heard.

Frank and Ed Blevins, fiddle and guitar, and Jack Reedy, champion banjoist, all of Marion; Jess Johnson, celebrated as the "Fiddlin' Fool" of West Virginia; Abner Keesee, singer, of Campbell County, Va., and others who were heard at White House programs, will be heard at White Top.

A new feature this year will be the inclusion of children's singing games.

Firms Oppose Plan for State Stone Plants

Private Companies Predict Ruin for Business; Meeting Today.

Baltimore, July 30 (Spl.).—Plans of the Maryland State Roads Commission to establish its own stone-crushing plant in Montgomery County, as announced today, will be fought by owners of private stone-crushing plants, who claim the State-operated plant would ruin their business.

The proposal will be discussed at a meeting of the highways board tomorrow. According to present plans, the plant would be located between Travilah and Glen. It would be manned by free labor, provided by the county's unemployment relief bureau.

"Nothing has yet been decided, and the whole matter is based on free labor in connection with relief plans," it was said today by Maj. Harry D. Williar, chief engineer of the highways board. "The plan involves the improvement of roads, improvements which may be made if they can be made cheaply, but which otherwise will not be made at all.

"As for the establishment of like plants in other parts of the State, that depends entirely on whether similar conditions are produced in the other parts of the State. In Montgomery County there is a dormant quarry on which this free labor might be used."

Opposition has been voiced by the M. J. Grove Lime Co., which operates plants in Frederick County and which has received much business from the States roads commission in past years.

Officials of the firm pointed out today that if the State persists in its plan to establish a stone-crushing plant, it would "finally drive the present producers, who have invested millions of dollars in their plants and equipment, out of business entirely, as well as dry up the source of revenue from which the State collects its taxes."

Virginia Shows 96% Boost In Income Tax

Reports of First Seven Counties Indicate Huge Gains.

Richmond, July 30 (Spl.).—The first seven counties to report 1934 individual income tax assessments recorded a 96 per cent gain, according to the books of C. L. Pettis, auditor for the State department of taxation.

All of the seven are agricultural counties of relatively small population, so their gain is believed to be considerably in excess of any possible gain to be registered in the State at large. The two cities to report thus far—Norfolk and Fredericksburg—gained about 25 per cent over 1933. Accomac, Campbell, Gloucester, Goochland, Rockingham and Shenandoah are the localities whose individual income reports are in.

They had a total assessment of $10,791.57 in 1933 and $21,145.41 in 1934.

Goochland Shows Gain.

Goochland, the county nearest Richmond, reported $11,829.66 this year, compared to $7,715.22 in 1933 and a gain of $4,114.44.

Accomac reported $1,139.98 compared to $257.63, a gain of $88.35; Campbell, $1,091.32 compared to $252.65, a gain of $838.67; Floyd, $247.83 compared to $193.87, a gain of $53.06; Gloucester $4,839.43, compared to $1,328.04, a gain of $3,511.39; Rockingham, $1,049.28, compared to $587.86, a gain of $461.42, and Shenandoah $947.91 compared to $456.30, a gain of $491.61.

The 1934 assembly's increase in the income tax through lowered exemptions is believed mainly responsible for the additional assessments, but the reports indicate also a substantial increase in the income of the "Little Man."

On Peery Recommendation.

The exemptions were lowered on recommendation of Gov. Peery. C. H. Morrissett, the State tax commissioner, warned against an optimistic view of early reports pointing out that returns from only seven counties and two cities have come in and that it is unreasonable to assume that the State may expect a revenue greater than was estimated in January.

The lowering of the exemptions brought upon the tax books thousands of Virginians of moderate income who under the old scale did not have to pay State or Federal income taxes.

Carter on vagrancy charges today after he had turned his testimony into a strong defense of his party's activity and its rights to organize workers. The others, Kermit Hardin and James Weaver, failed to appear and the court ordered their rearrest. During the Crouch hearing, Magistrate Carter received a telegram from the International Labor Defense in Richmond and two others from Charlottesville protesting the arrests and demanding release of the defendants.

Allred, Hunter Enter Run-Off To Rule Texas

9 of 10 Representatives Escape New Voting; Connally Wins.

Dallas, Tex., July 30 (AP).—Two attorneys comparatively young in the turbulent Texas political arena drove through to commanding leads today in the race to succeed Gov. Miriam A. (Ma) Ferguson.

One was James V. Allred, the State's attorney general, and the other was Tom Hunter, a Wichita Falls neighbor of Allred.

The Ferguson-indorsed candidate, Charles C. McDonald, also of Wichita Falls, was third in the latest count of votes in Saturday's Democratic primary electoin and apparently had little chance of entering the run-off election for State offices August 25.

The latest tabulatoin of votes by the Texas Election Bureau gave Allred 249,954; Hunter, 202,227; McDonald, 171,446. There were three other candidates.

Ferguson Waits to Hear.

"Farmer Jim" Ferguson, elected chief executive of the State in 1914 and reelected in 1916, would not commit himself regarding the leaders in the Governor's race.

"I want to hear them articulate a little," he said. 'Texans should be in no hurry to commit themselves. Neither has ever mentioned, in his platform, labor, business or farming. I'd like to know what they think about problems that confront us.

"The relief situation is acute and it will be on them. I am anxious to know what they will offer about that situation."

In the Congressional races, nine of the ten Texas Representatives who ran for reelection apparently had won without the necessity of a run-off and the State's junior Senator, Tom Connally, swamped Joe Bailey, jr., one of the three Texas Representatives-at-Large at the last session of Congress, in the Senatorial race. Connally had 409,506 and Bailey 259,125.

McCraw, Woodward in Run-Off.

William McCraw, of Dallas, held a slight lead over Walter Woodward, of Coleman, for attorney general and they were assured positions in the run-off. The votes were McCraw 264,034, Woodward 250,308.

State Senator Walter Woodul, of Houston, polled 236,030 votes for lieutenant governor and will face another Senator, Joe Moore, of Greenville, whose total was 124,845, in the run-off. George Sheppard, State Comptroller; Charley Lockhart, State Treasurer, and J. E. McDonald, Commissioner of Agriculture, seemed assured of reelection.

For railroad commissioner, Lon A. Smith, chairman, and John Pundt, of Dallas, went into the run-off with totals of 210,430 and 175,384, respectively. Hal S. Lattimore, of Forth Worth, civil appears court justice, ran up 250,897 votes for a place on the supreme court and John M. Sharp, of Waxahachie, was next with 197,246. A run-off will be necessary.

Congressional Returns.

National Representatives who apparently won their fights for renomination without the necessity of a run-off were Morgan Sanders in the Third District; Sam Rayburn in the Fourth; Hatton Sumners in the Fifth; Luther Johnson in the Sixth; Joe Eagle in the Eighth; O. H. Cross in the Eleventh; Fritz Lanham in the Twelfth; Milton West in the Fifteenth, and Thomas Blanton in the Seventeenth.

W. D. MacFarlane, in the Thirteenth District, was forced into a runoff election with Sam B Spence, of Wichita Falls. Roger Davis and Bonner Frizzell were slated for a run-off in the Seventh; George Hahon and Judge Clark Mullican in the Nineteenth; Maury Maverick and Mayor Quinn in the Twentieth, and Charles L. South, of Coleman, and Carl Runge, of Mason in the Twenty-first.

Youth Shot Dead While Reenacting Dillinger Shooting

Hampton, Va., July 30 (AP).—One more death was attributed indirectly to John Dillinger today—the death of Earl Blake, 22, during a reenactment of the shooting of Dillinger.

Blake (as "Dillinger") was shot in the stomach at his home last night by his half-brother, Henry Klees, 16, of Atlanta (a "Government agent"), when the gun held by Klees proved to be loaded.

Before he died, Blake told of the reenactment and absolved Klees of blame, but the boy was held on a murder charge pending an investigation.

Hollywood, July 30 (AP).—A few more than 100 passes to the cemetery where final rites for Marie Dressler will be held tomorrow were given to close friends of the actress today.

The public will not be admitted to Forest Lawn Memorial Park, in nearby Glendale, where services will be conducted at 9 a. m.

"To avoid a repetition of the undignified performances of the curious at other motion picture stars' funerals," was the explanation given by film studio officials for the exclusion of the public. The statement, it was said, had particular reference to the souvenir-seeking crowds attending the Barbara La Marr, Rudolph Valentino and Lilyan Tashman services.

Some newspapermen will be admitted to the church, but photographers will be excluded.

The body of the actress will be placed in a crypt in Forest Lawn.

The Rev. Neal Dodd, pastor of the Little Church Around the Corner in Hollywood, will preside at the service. Jeanette MacDonald, concert and motion picture star, will sing "Abide With Me."

All work will cease temporarily on the lot where Miss Dressler, late in life, achieved success which fate usually deals only to youngsters.

Roanoke Storm Leads To Warning on Water

Roanoke, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—Health authorities here and at Salem are warning against the use of drinking water except from inspected sources since the storm that flooded Roanoke County and city Friday night.

Many springs and wells were so polluted that fear of disease is felt. Damage caused by the storm in Roanoke City is now estimated to be around $200,000.

Bank-Fraud Trial Told of Warnings

Elkins, W. Va., July 30 (Spl.). George M. Moore, a Clarksburg banker, was a Government witness today at the trial of seven directors of the Traders National Bank at Buckhannon in Federal court here, charged with conspiracy to defraud the bank.

He testified that as former National bank examiner he made seven examinations of the bank from April, 1923, to March, 1926, and voiced criticism within that period, especially of the accounts of William Post, president, and U. G. Young, director.

He said he called the attention of Sanford Graham, cashier, to the fact there were too many overdrafts. Moore added that on several occasions, he mentioned the situation to the directors. F. C. Ockershauder and R. M. Seabury, both of Washington, were other bank examiners to testify today.

Cover the left half of the above picture. Note how old the face looks because the scalp is bare. Then cover the right half and notice how much younger the same face appears because the scalp is covered with hair.

NO SURE method of preventing baldness or re-growing hair was known thirty years ago. Then—men experimented with cure-all remedies which usually did more harm than good. Now—a few old-fashioned men still use their scalps as experimental laboratories for patent remedies and barber-shop treatments. But modern-minded men have learned that baldness can be avoided and hair can be regrown, when proper specialized treatment is administered to the scalp.

Thinking men realize that the science of hair culture has advanced in pace with other scientific discoveries. They know that Thomas treatment offers the most precise, reliable method known to modern science, of overcoming the various types of dandruff, stopping abnormal hair-fall, and re-growing hair on thin or bald spots. Thomas is helping 1600 persons each day to have good, healthy heads of hair—and can do the same for you.

A Hopeful Ending.

This morning 12,000 longshoremen return to work at Pacific Coast ports. Thus will end a series of industrial disorders that began with the walkout of the San Francisco longshoremen early in May, spread to other ports, and reached a climax with the declaration of a general sympathetic strike within the San Francisco area.

If the men were returning to work either beaten and resentful, or triumphant and arrogantly determined to make no concessions, continued peace in the Pacific ports would be highly unlikely. Happily, both employers and employes seem now to realize that the public interest is paramount to that of any single group in the community.

The union has agreed to continue the system of hiring halls pending the outcome of arbitration of their differences with the companies. The companies have agreed that the National Longshoremen's Board and the union shall place representatives in the hiring halls to insure termination of the abuses associated with that institution. Furthermore, there shall be no discrimination on account of union affiliations or strike activity. Hereafter, questions of discrimination will be referred to representatives of the board, with decisions binding on both parties.

The patent reasonableness of these mutual concessions does not detract from their significance. They show how easy it is to provide a basis for arbitration of most industrial disputes. It should not take a general strike to bring that lesson home to either side in labor controversies.

The Future Of The AAA.

Secretary Wallace has decided to appeal to the farmers of the country to obtain their support for continuance of crop-control plans. The devastating drought has discredited the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to such an extent that its continuation is actively threatened. What expert and disinterested criticism of rash control policies could not do, nature has accomplished. Unfortunately emotion instead of reason now threatens to gain the upper hand, and sweep away good along with bad.

The drought has forced the country to take notice of the appalling waste and destruction that has been officially decreed as necessary to a program of crop control. It is most unlikely that we shall again witness a slaughter of pigs, a wholesale plowing-up of crops, or a repetition of the other practices designed to create an artificial scarcity. On the other hand, production of crops of which the supply is already excessive, or production under uneconomic conditions, should be intelligently discouraged.

Less official compulsion and more reliable advice; fewer Government subsidies and more encouragement to produce along profitable lines, should be the aim of our planners. Secretary Wallace is undoubtedly right in believing that one drought does not make crop control entirely unnecessary. But it does show the need for a radical revision of abstract ideas as to what constitutes proper planning.

State Responsibilities.

The FERA has engaged the services of an expert to make studies of the financial condition of State and municipal governments with a view to determining what share of relief costs they may reasonably be expected to pay. After the completion of such surveys, State legislatures will be urged to consider suggestions as to means of raising revenue, lightening tax burdens, or decreasing the costs of government.

Although one expert will not be able to do much toward reforming the practices of the 48 States of the Union, it is essential for the FERA to bring pressure to bear upon communities that try to shift the burden of relief charges that are within their taxable capacity. Whether Federal aid is substantial or limited, whether it represents a relatively large or quite small proportion of the total amount disbursed for relief purposes, is not the chief consideration. The demoralizing effects of Federal subsidies grow out of the effort to escape local responsibilities, and the only way of determining whether escape is contemplated is to study the financial position of local governments.

The tendency to regard the relief funds as a pool from which each State must grab what it can for fear another will get its share is discernible in many of the charges of sectional favoritism. Relief needs know no State boundaries and a Federal relief agency is inefficient to the extent that it recognizes them. Those communities that can defray the costs of relief should be compelled to do so; those that are too poor to do so must be aided.

The information on which to base decisions should be made available as soon as possible in order that the Federal Government may avoid any further unnecessary subsidizing of irresponsible local governments. Heretofore, of course, the FERA has merely encouraged such irresponsibility.

The Hapsburg Movement.

After a week of virtual civil war—the second such outbreak this year—Austria is again settling down to the temporary quiet of exhaustion. The paramount question in the minds of her people, and in the minds of those outsiders who realize the strategic importance of Austria in the European political scene, is how long this uneasy peace is likely to be maintained.

It will not be enduring, certainly, unless the fundamental causes of upheaval are cleared away. As long as the government in power at Vienna is faced with hopeless economic prospects, further desperate uprisings will be inevitable. They may come from the Nazis, still clinging to the idea that union with Germany is the best solution. Or revolutionary violence might conceivably be launched by the proscribed communist party, in the hope that both Hungary and Rumania would also rise and provide a belt of proletarian republics running from Switzerland to Russia. Either of these possibilities would bring Austria progressively nearer to complete anarchy, with foreign military intervention probable as the result.

Evidently those now uneasily in the saddle at Vienna realize the grim alternatives before them. And that they are working toward a relatively constructive plan is indicated by the appointment of young Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg as Chancellor. As most of the Cabinet, he is known as personally favorable to a Hapsburg restoration. So the new government may be expected to work toward the elevation of Prince Otto as emperor to the extent that the great powers will permit that end.

Of course a mere Hapsburg restoration would in itself do nothing to solve Austria's problems, except in so far as it could subordinate internal feuds to a common loyalty to the ancient dynasty. But what many in Austria hope is that the elevation of Otto would mean reunion with Hungary, or at least a close political and economic working agreement between the two countries. Moreover it is also believed that return of the Hapsburgs would immediately end the movement for Austro-German union.

Few people regard the proposal as ideal, for many of the problems facing Austria, and to a lesser extent Hungary, would be totally unsolved by any form of union between the two. But Austria is not in a position where an ideal solution is apparent. And any development which promises to keep the country from collapse is preferable to the present situation.

Whether monarchical restoration gains force would now seem to depend primarily on the attitude of Italy, France and Great Britain. The latter government is not averse to the development, but in both Paris and Rome it is held that national interests would not be forwarded by a Hapsburg return to Vienna. That may be true, yet it should be brought home to these two capitals that there are limits to their ability to keep Austria in vassalage. France and Italy prevented that natural union of democratic Germany and Austria which would perhaps have prevented the rise of the Nazis in either country. The move toward Austro-Hungarian union is presented by harassed Vienna as its only present alternative.

If Rome and Paris veto this also, it will be pertinent to ask what constructive procedure they are willing to sponsor. Other nations, which saved both France and Italy from total defeat during the war, are getting very tired of the slow strangulation being practiced with the most callous inhumanity upon helpless Austria.

Stampeding?

A curious law of inversion appears to hold sway in the philatelic field. Generally speaking, the smaller the political hopes of a country, the larger its postage-stamps; the more unstable the Treasury the lovelier the designs and colors sponsored by the Postoffice Department. Witness the sobriety of British issues on the one hand; and on the other—but here instances would be odious. It is enough to say that, had success crowned the efforts of the Barcelona gentleman who wanted to buy a throne in Andorra, Andorran stamps would probably have become ravishing.

With certain qualms, therefore, do we note both the increasing size, and the developing beauty of those series upon series of stamps with which Postmaster General Farley is wearing out the presses and driving collectors crazy. He is flinging "Roses, roses riotously to the throng." He is dipping his brush "in sunset and eclipse."

Also, although for years our 3-cent stamps have been red and the 3 purple, purple-passioned Mr. Farley has lately issued a series of 3-centers in red. Is this only another expression of Mr. Farley's tendencies in art? Or is it an ominous reply to the hope of the masses for a return to the old 2-cent letter rate?

In Memory Of Jaures.

Disastrous enough in many of its consequences, the Nazi bullet which ended the life of Engelbert Dollfuss has not precipitated another European war. This recalls the fact that just twenty years ago today another political assassin's bullet ended the life of Jean Jaures, and did almost as much as the killing at Sarajevo to make the World War inevitable.

When he was murdered, Jaures, the uncontested leader of the French Socialists, was undertaking peace-preservation negotiations with the spokesmen of the German Socialists. Both he and they were resolved to use all their combined influence against hostilities, and so enormous was their power that their hope seemed to have solid foundation. The assassination, however, destroyed it. When French jingoism acclaimed the foul crime, distrust was sown and division flowered among the German Social-Democrats. Their members in the Reichstag voted for the war-credits while the French successors of Jaures clamored for the melting of cathedral bells and their conversion into shell-casings.

Yesterday, close upon the murder of Dollfuss, French Socialists and Communists met to pay a "common front" tribute to the memory of Jaures. They commemorated that great humanitarian in the historic Pantheon, where his ashes lie buried along with those of Voltaire, Mirabeau and Victor Hugo. The scope of the celebration, the sincerity of its participants, the tone of all the national comment upon it; nobody can read the dispatches recounting these and yet believe that France has any wish today to leave her future to the arbitrament of force.

Another Exploded Balloon.

Plans for extending the activities of the Second Export-Import Bank to assist the financing of trade with any country except Russia have been announced by George N. Peek, head of that organization. The Bank proposes to extend credits, running from six months to five years, to applicants for loans. And it is announced that in exceptional cases the Government will share the risks of the undertaking.

In the absence of specific proposals, it is useless to speculate upon the extent to which the Bank can open up frozen international trade channels. Clearly, however, our overseas commerce is not languishing for lack of financing facilities but because of the absence of safe, profitable and unblocked outlets for our goods. Instead of sketching vague plans for expanding trade with the world at large by grants of credit, it would seem more practical to put life into the inert First Export-Import Bank, established for the sole purpose of financing trade with Russia.

Unfortunately, after passage of the Johnson Act, the Bank's directors voted to suspend all activities pending negotiation of a debt settlement with Russia. Mr. Peek now says that he sees no prospect of a change in that attitude in the near future.

As representatives of the State Department and the Soviet government are now in the midst of debt negotiations, it is surmised that Mr. Peek's announcement is intended to impress the Russians. It seems doubtful, however, whether they will be greatly moved by such crude maneuvering, especially as Russia is not a helpless suppliant for commercial favors. On the contrary, the United States has more to gain than Russia from a revival of trade. Ordinarily we sell much more to that country than we buy from it.

In recent years Russia's reviving trade has been increasingly allocated to other countries as a result of our policy of invoking irritating and discriminatory administrative rulings. While we have been thus engaged in alienating a potentially good customer, other nations have been eager to attract Russian trade. While American banks, under Government lead, have held off from providing the long-term credits which Russia demands, Germany, Great Britain and other countries have hastened to supply them. The outcome is shown by the foreign trade record. From first place as supplier of goods for the Russian market in 1930 this country dropped to sixth place last year.

Recognition of Russia was followed by establishment of an Export-Import Bank which was expected to grant the long-term credits needed by Russia. It was also anticipated that there would be a restoration of amicable political relationships, clearing the way for an expansion of commercial trading. To date these hopes have not been fulfilled; the Bank is not functioning; the debt agreement between the two countries is not signed; and the political atmosphere has not been cleared by declaring Russia a defaulter before giving the Soviet government any opportunity to negotiate a debt settlement.

Meantime, the British have concluded a trade agreement with Russia which calls for an approximate balance of payments between the two countries by 1938. Although that does not necessitate an exactly balanced exchange of goods, it means that Russia agrees to purchase sufficient goods and services from Great Britain to offset British purchases from Russia. While we haggle, therefore, over debt settlements and indulge in ineffective pressure, Russian trade is going elsewhere. Moreover, some of it is being irrevocably lost to us through special trade and clearing arrangements that will stand as an obstacle to the effective functioning of the First Export-Import Bank, when and if it begins to operate.

A two-cent stamp carries a picture of the Grand Canyon. We are at a loss to understand the significance of this, unless it is meant as a sort of graphic indication of the hole the Postoffice Department is in.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR made a war speech to the people in Berlin in which he said: "A fateful hour has fallen for Germany. Envious peoples everywhere are compelling us to our just defense. The sword has been forced into our hands. I hope if my efforts at the last hour do not succeed in bringing our opponents to see eye to eye with us and in maintaining the peace, we shall, with God's help, so wield the sword that we shall restore it to its sheath again with honor."

RUSSIA ORDERED a general mobilization of 4,000,000 men. Germany declared a "state of war." Great Britain was practically mobilized. Belgium ordered a general mobilization. American Ambassador Penfield at Vienna said the situation was growing in seriousness.

THE GERMAN IMPERIAL Railway administration informed the Belgian State Railways officially that all international trains into Germany had been discontinued. German military activities along the French border caused France considerable concern.

AMERICANS ABROAD became alarmed at the prospect of war as transatlantic service of passenger and freight steamships, with sailing between German and American ports, was practically suspended for an indefinite period owing to the international situation abroad.

The Innocent Abroad.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those of us who were and are proponents of the Administration have read and appreciated the sophisticated, and, at times, cynical comments of Carlisle Bargeron, often envying the judicious admixture of formic acid with printer's ink. And while we might have winced at the impaling of the Democratic donkey with journalistic picadores, we hardly anticipated that the Maestro Matador might expose himself, in turn, to some of the good natured raillery which seems justified when the arch sophisticate decides to do the common and probably stupid thing.

That the Washington politicians who constitute the meat upon which our Ceasar has grown fat so far forget, if they ever knew any politics to forget, and having hoarded their several Government stipends, hie themselves across the sea to the realms of the defaulters and in time to risk the censure of the taxpayer and proletariat, may be overlooked, as Mr Carlisle Bargeron has proven that they are without brains.

That the old cynic himself is to join the trek to "Yewrope" and come back prattling to us of the Louvre and the Cheshire cheese and Capri is too good to be true. That he should have left himself wide open for the gentle and amateurish jibes that should be his was more than we could have hoped for. Our critical and prescient commentator will return to our shores speaking of "Frawnce" and babbling of the conversational shopworn conventionalities common to those recently returned from abroad. We can anticipate the dragging in by the hair of the head, as it were, references to Bargeron's vacation abroad. We hope that he achieves this with some subtlety.

I'll bet even money Carlisle has never seen the State Capital of the State he was born in, unless he was born in the same capital

All Are Incorrect.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: More than a week ago a letter appeared in this column in which reference was made to the excellent English used by certain persons.

Since the writer has only a very limited education, she is interested in knowing if the following are correct: "Only the other day I saw where . . ." "The reason is because . . ." "To later place . . ." "The data is . . ." and "Richmond is one of those American cities that has peculiar charm."

If the public can not rely on the English as it is written and spoken by those who are said to be authorities, then it (the public) will never know who is right.

For more than a year ago, two of the best-known newspapers in this city ran an advertisement in which the word "caning" was spelled "caneing."

A STENOGRAPHER.

Out to Repeal Repeal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest and gratification the letter of J. T. Davis in The Post of July 26. All who are fair-minded and who will accept the facts will agree with him that conditions are worse now so far as the liquor problem is concerned than they were before repeal. The increase in the number of arrests for drunken drivers, increase of bootlegging, growing alcoholism and decrease in anticipated revenue, is truly appalling.

Coupled with the myriad evils that follow either directly or indirectly the almost unlimited flow of liquor, our country faces a dangerous situation ineeded. Conditions were bad under prohibition, as any rational person knows, but much progress had been made in the right direction. Under repeal the situation is much worse and practically all machinery for controlling the evil has been wiped away.

Mr. Davis admits he made a mistake in voting for repeal, but that were he given another chance, he "would never do it again." It is only a matter of time until millions more of our thinking citizens will see the truth in the same clear light. Then, and not until then, will we have a sane, practical and effective system of liquor control in our country and a return to a more wholesome state of society than that in which we are now suffering the blighting effects of this major curse.

I am glad to say that I voted to retain the eighteenth amendment. Were it to be done over, I would do it again. I believe, too, that the majority of the good people in my State of Kentucky would vote likewise—her absurd reputation of "fine horses, pretty women and good whisky" to the contrary notwithstanding. God knows, if any people are aware of the evils of the liquor traffic, we people of Kentucky are!

Colonization—New Style

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Prof. Bolton, of the University of California, an authority on Latin or Spanish-American affairs, and author of a notable history of Mexico, informs me that the Germans plan to establish a colony of a million in the Amazon Valley and the movement is making progress. A bookseller in the university city of Berkeley, adds to this statement the information that a representative of this colony whom he met was collecting all kinds of information which might be of value in taming the Amazon wilderness and making it habitable. He had already collected much from the departments at Washington and agricultural departments of American universities which might bear on model colonization.

This is good news to offset the pessimism which has too much affected many men and nations. Colonization or the movement of persons, families or vast groups from crowded or overpopulated areas to new territory has often been little to the honor of civilized society. It has frequently followed war, conquest, greed, exploitation. Great nations, peoples and races have less reason for self-satisfaction and a superman philosophy than is commonly cherished when they contemplate their history of colonization.

The Germans here give a suggestion to the world. They are hemmed in a small territory, the size of Texas, with a population over 20 times the population of that State. Colonization in the old fashioned offends the conscience of the world. Peter the Great thought war a profitable industry, but modern conditions show it does not pay.

The people of Germany have done great things in their history. They reach the world today by their literature directly or translated; their ships sail all seas; probably they at their best are as well fitted for model scientific colonization as any other nation of our time. The Amazon policy, if well carried out, seems good news and a forelooking policy that should be planetary and universal and corrective of the maldistribution of the population and natural wealth of the world.

We hail, therefore, the model German colonization scheme in the Amazon Valley as good news at this time. Put it on the front page of metropolitan papers. Let it be widely known that the Pacific world is on the stage of world affairs, a fact big with promise, a new opportunity for mankind.

May the Germans who go thither do their best and reach a higher level of civilization than the world has ever known.

W. SCOTT.

Pittsfield, N. H., July 12.

Jeffersonians

It is most important at this time . . . to reexamine the political tenets and principles formulated and expressed by Thomas Jefferson. It is true that the word "democratic" means rule by the people, and so would apply to any popular majority opinions and actions. But it must be remembered that the political party founded by Jefferson was in its early years called Republican and, furthermore, had certain broad rules and principles formulated by its founder. . . . Jefferson did not simply found a party name or label, but a great political party endowed by him with very definite, though broad and general principles.

The basis of all these principles was freedom. His cardinal principle was equal rights to all, special privileges to none, and also that the best government for people was the least government. He always vigorously opposed a strongly centralized Federal government and advocated local self-government.

Here are two quotations from letters from him to Madison, both from Paris: January 30, 1787, "government of force is a government of wolves over sheep," and again, August 28, 1789, "The want of bread for some days past has greatly endangered the peace of the city. Notwithstanding this distress and the palpable impotence of the city administration to furnish bread to the city, it was not until yesterday that general leave was given to the bakers to go into the country and buy flour for themselves as they can. This will soon relieve us, as the wheat harvest is well advanced. Never was there a country where the practice of governing too much had taken deeper root and done more mischief."

The above might have been written today in these United States, for under a so-called Democratic Administration during the past year an elaborate system of bureaucracy has been established for destroying grains and other foodstuffs and cotton and wool in spite of the fact that millions of people were and are suffering from insufficient food and clothing and all we get from the Administration at Washington is threats of further coercion of labor and capital and a multiplication of bureaucracies to regiment, regulate and control all industry and thrift to the point of extinction.

Now, Jefferson would have been the last person in the world to interfere with Socialists and Communists, for he always maintained that freedom of speech and "press" and assembly was the surest way to reveal truth and cure error, but I think he would very probably and properly have objected to those advocating Socialistic and Communistic doctrines and proposing to regiment, regulate and restrict everybody and everything, those who believe in what Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has so aptly termed "government by compulsion," calling themselves Jeffersonian Democrats.

(From an address before the Jefferson Club, of Cambridge, Mass., delivered by Edmund J. Burke).

The Post Impressionist

She Lived For Greta.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

ODD as it may seem, we don't believe all we read about the movies. Take those stories of how the industry has "experts" raking history for "suitable characters." What are the "outstanding" characters that the rakes have thus far uncovered? Catherine of Russia, and Christina of Sweden. Experts—and they haven't yet found the one historic character that Garbo was born to play!

Yes, of course: The famous Chatham's once famous granddaughter, Lady Hester Stanhope.

* * *

Do they want picturesque background? Look at hers:

"History can hardly show such another license as was enjoyed by the ruling oligarchy of England in the Eighteenth Century. There was no court comparable to Versailles—or Balmoral—to impose decorum. . . . Parliament was their family council; public opinion . . . had no organs wherewith to chastise their follies and aberrations. The marvel is that they preserved such a line of capable statesmen."

* * *

Isn't "an hereditary taint" the typical heroine's traditional sympathy-getter? Glance at that of the erratic, the beautiful, the daring Lady Hester:

She "had alarming strains in her ancestry. Her father, the third Earl of Stanhope, with his public radicalism and private despotism, was barely sane, and there ran in her veins the blood of that terrible 'Diamond' Pitt, the East India trader," which as Lord Rosebery said, "came all aflame and flowed like burning lava."

* * *

A brilliant beginning?

Her uncle was the great William Pitt, whose defense of the American Colonies every schoolboy used to recite. When Lady Chatham died—the girl's first protector against her father's madness—Pitt, admiring Lady Hester's "capacity," made her his political hostess, as well as "the dispenser of much patronage and sole Secretary of State for the Department of Treasury banquets."

* * *

Unfortunate and frequent affairs of the heart?

Those men for whom this witty and intellectual aristocrat "felt a real love either eluded her, like the cold-hearted Lord Granville Leveson-Gower, or were snatched from her, like Sir John Moore, the hero of Quebec. Those with whom she tried to content herself, "like the egotistic companion of her travels (Michael Bruce), or the coarse soldier, Capt. Louslenau, the subject of a brief flare of passion in her last years, her powerful mind" must have despised.

* * *

And the dramatic instinct! Joan Haslip calls Lady Hester "the last of the Eighteenth Century eccentrics, the first of the Nineteenth Century pioneers."

She turns her back upon all that brilliant social life of which she had been one of the brightest ornaments. She, a European woman, plunges into an East that was then, even for European men, almost unknown and more than almost forbidden.

Dressed not as a Turkish woman, but as a Turkish man, she wanders through Turkey. In the ruins of Ascalon, she digs for hidden treasure and, finding nothing but a statue, she pulverizes it in her fury. On and on she rides. She gives "a curious anticipation of the career of Annie Besant by plunging into the iridescent gulfs of Oriental mysticism and occultism, and by claiming a secret religious privilege and status for herself."

A surviving romantic "of the school of Chateaubriand and Byron, who carried the pageant of their bleeding hearts into the waste places of the earth for consolation," she sought the East, "to bury herself in its sands and its decay." Yet she marches into the crumbling colonnades of Palmyra and dreams of "refounding the kingdom of Zenobia!"

* * *

Well, after all this progress among Pashas and Emirs, Bedouins and Druses, she does incredibly achieve a strange political force. That London Times reviewer of the Haslip biography, upon whom we have already liberally drawn, has written:

"In the bizarre circumstances of her expatriation, she made herself something like an independent power, dealing on equal terms with the Porte and the Khedive, the Emir of Lebanon and the representatives of the great European powers, from the fortified monastery—where, among her Albanian bodyguard, she lived in ghostly communion with the dead Patriarch Mars Elias, sitting embalmed in his chair—or from her later impregnable mountain-citadel of Djoun."

And of that last fastness and its chatelaine Miss Haslip has written:

"In truth, this half-ruined convent, guarded by the proud heart of an English gentlewoman, was the only spot throughout all Syria and Palestine in which the will of Mehemet Ali and his fierce lieutenant (Ibrahim) was not the law. . . . So long as Chatham's granddaughter breathed a breath of life, there was always one hillock—and that, too, in the midst of a most populous district—which stood out, and kept its freedom."

* * *

What is the answer to the riddle of handsome Lady Hester Stanhope?

Was she indeed a conscious pioneer? Or was she merely a dreamer and no more? Was she a Twentieth Century woman born in the Eighteenth? Or was she a heart-broken being running away from a life that she could escape only by death or flight?

It is just possible that Garbo could answer these questions which nobody has yet been able to answer.

And, since none of those "expert investigators" for the movies have dug up the facts for her, we hereby offer our own humble services.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

What's a Book Reviewer?

THEO. HALL.

FOR the fine, full answer to that, I'm going to beg the question at once. Some one implied the query the other day in asking Miss Amy Loveman, of the Saturday Review of Literature, for a list of books on book reviewing. She started off, as I remember, with Aristotle's "Poetics," and had a luscious list of names of writers on the gentle art of criticism. But though it would take a fast reader three months to run through her suggestions, they didn't scratch the ground. Every Tom, Dick and Harry has written a tome to tell you how you can call your neighbor's book good, bad, or indifferent, and get away with it. Henry Hazlitt last fall put salt on the tails of most of these theories and hung them up in this volume, "The Anatomy of Criticism," to which you can turn if you'd see how many birds are quite able to avoid flocking together. But should you want to come down to cases on the practice of book reviewing, you won't find a better short summary than Miss Loveman's own essay in "Designed for Reading." And Llewelyn Jones, one-time literary editor of the Chicago Evening Post, put all the rules into the neat pages of "The Art of Book Reviewing." I admit, in my time, to having boned up on that in the Library of Congress—with perhaps but scant effect.

• • • •

Yet all the above is no answer to —what is a book reviewer? As far as I know the breed, he appears to be a person of inconsequential age who happens to receive a certain number of cubic yards of books every week and who has to write so many thousand words about them in the same time. His materials are said books, a good but fatigued pair of glasses, a typewriter and a pile of paper. If, as to books, I prefer little ones—as to glasses, dark for reading in the sun —as to typewriter, elite type with blue ribbon—as to paper, yellow, all that has no value as definition of the species.

More to the point, the reviewer seems to be a person fonder of street cars than taxis (a Washington taxi is the world's worst bookrest), and much given to leaving parties at 11 p. m. with the infinitely pathetic remark that he has to finish a novel on Charlemagne and get the gist out of a playful little volume of 900 pages on the evolution of the crow-bar, all before going to bed.

You can tell him also from the fact that he will never open a conversation about books, but his hope that you will do so finds reflection in the cheeriest facial expression of which he is capable.

One final, but not always available, token—if any printing press should by sad mischance happen to be bombed, you may be sure the countenance of any book reviewer you know will go around "training clouds of glory." Far be it from me to suggest that he had a hand in the deed.

• • • •

Equally perceptive note should be taken of what a book reviewer is not. In the first place, he is not a "great reader." As I understand the term, that applies to a man, say, who has an early dinner, climbs into bed with a gory detective yarn after putting the cigars, the sandwiches, the pitcher or decanter, and the electric fan within easy reach, and who finds nothing more on his mind than a hearty and consuming desire to know how Lord Sherlock Fortune Van Dine gets his man.

Not so the book reviewer. Flipping over the pages like a housewife looking for that lost dollar bill, scrawling in margins, slipping in bookmarks where the author says itself, he conducts himself as if his personal pains had to equal the sum of all the pains of all the authors of all the books he has to read. Conscientiousness is the cross of the book reviewer.

And he is not a literary critic of amateur verse; nor a walking card catalogue of the literature of the early history of Zambesiland; nor a literary agent; nor any good at all, with his friends, as a correspondent. All that he knows he is not.

What he sometimes does not know, though it's frequently made quite plain to him, is that he is not "the heir of all the ages."

Reading, as he does, the "best that is said, thought, and done" (at least so far as this exalted matter got into print during the past week), it would be strange indeed if he did not have moments of heady evangelizing, of an irrepressible desire to preach and editorialize. He has filled himself in the last month, say, with the combined watch-words and catch-words of Charles Beard, Mark Sullivan, Lewis Mumford, Frank Simonds, Stuart Chase, Walter Lippman, George Soule, Dr. W. Beran Wolfe, and Joseph Stalin—the composite body of whose wisdom might well startle the world. But the conspicuous fancifulness of that wisdom being his needs no comment.

No—though any reviewer worth his salt would far rather ascend the pulpit or write an editorial than come upon a thousand-word book worth a full column review, he had best know that these yearned-for delights are not his functions.

• • • •

Just what his function is can be put very simply. Of any book he should give or imply the soundest answers of which he is capable to three questions — What did the author intend in his book? Did he succeed in doing it? Was it worth doing? That is simply all there is to it.

Though one might add, though minor, triumph of getting to the bottom of the column without having had to mention a single new book—a feat, of course, not to be done every day in the week.

Hitler's Rise Credited To Versailles Treaty

Peace Terms Pave Way for Nazis to Delude Suffering Germans, Says Observer, in Reviewing World War Reaction.

EXACTLY 20 years ago on August 1, the world was plunged into a carnage of blood and horror. The greatest of all wars in history was launched then after the failure of diplomatic negotiations to localize the Austro-Serbian conflict, which grew out of the assassination, at Sarajevo, of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir apparent to the throne of Austria-Hungary.

The assassination did not create any particular tension among the German people. It did not interrupt the series of Gartenfests and other gay summer diversions. Even the Kaiser had gone off on a summer cruise to Bombay, whence he hastily returned to Berlin when the peace of Europe trembled in the balance during the closing days of July.

While July, 1914, was fading out, omnious war clouds began to darken the skies of Europe. The Austrian ultimatum to Serbia had been given voluminous attention in the German press. Men in uniform began to increase in number on the streets of German cities.

The wires ran hot between Berlin and St. Petersburg, between Berlin and Paris, Berlin and London. Then, like a stroke of lightning the declaration of war was dispatched to Russia from Berlin on August 1. Two days later, August 3, Germany declared war on France. The war dogs ran riot in Europe.

The writer, then a student at the University of Munich, on vacation with relatives at Nuremberg, was caught in the vortex of belligerent enthusiasm that swept Bavaria, the second largest state of Germany, like a powerful spiritual typhoon.

Young girls literally froze toward civilians. Their smiles were only for soldiers. The writer, not yet 18, and a native of the United States, was asked by young girls he had known since childhood: "Warum sind Sie nicht in Uniform?" Explanations did no good. Civilians simply were beyond the pale.

Men were called to the colors on July 28 already. But the real mobilization did not start until August 1, the day Germany declared war on Russia. It was accelerated on August 3, when Germany sent a war declaration to France.

On the following day, August 4, England declared war on Germany when Germany began pounding its military steam roller into Belgium, thus violating the treaty of 1839, under the provisions of which Germany pledged itself to respect the neutrality of Belgium.

Many Columns Devoted To Justification.

IMMEDIATELY German newspapers devoted many columns of space to the justification given by Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg to Sir Edward Goshen, the British Ambassador to Germany, for Germany's treaty breach.

"Wir koennen die Sicherheit des Reichs nicht von einem Fetzen Papier abhaengig machen." (We can not make the safety of the country dependent on a scrap of paper.) These were Von Bethmann-Hollweg's exact words as printed in the German press of August, 1914.

The German newspapers, in countless lead editorials, set forth that the chancellor had done his best to avert the breach with England, and had explained to Sir Edward that Germany's invasion of Belgium had been forced by bitter necessity, "Not kennt kein Gebot." (Necessity knows no law.)

Von Bethmann-Hollweg, to the very last, did not give up hope that England would remain neutral. Thus he was crestfallen, annihilated when Goshen asked for his passports on instructions from Sir Edward Grey, the British minister of foreign affairs.

But a vast rage seized the German populace. The bitterest hatred of all Germans, heretofore, had been directed against France. The mind of every German had been constantly indoctrinated with the idea that war with France was as inevitable and as natural as night follows day. But very few Germans had expected war with England.

Therefore, the German reaction was terrible to behold. It was extremely dangerous to be overheard speaking English. All British subjects were rounded up and placed in concentration camps. Americans who spoke no German, wore tiny American flags on their lapels for protection.

War enthusiasm was keyed to fever pitch, and an efficient propaganda machine saw to it that this enthusiasm did not wane. Even before Germany declared war on France, it was reported that French airplanes had bombed Nuremberg and Karlsruhe. But no one, either in Nuremberg or the neighboring glass manufacturing center of Fuerth, the ancient city founded by Charlemagne, which was equipped with strategic observation towers, had noticed any French planes. Yet the story was believed just the same.

For days on end, the pavements of German cities resounded to the ominous thuds of marching men. Regiments, brigades, whole divisions marched to the front, their rifles garlanded with flowers, but all bright metal spots on their uniforms covered with field gray cloth. No brightly colored uniforms, of which prewar Germany had been so proud, were to be seen any longer.

Bavaria Springs Surprise By Backing Kaiser.

IN Bavaria, an independent state, whose people, generally, were at loggerheads with the Prussians, there had been some doubt as to whether the government would back up the Kaiser's war policy. The Bavarians, a gay and convivial people, dislike the Prussians most heartily. Thus it would have caused but slight surprise if Bavaria had seceded from the empire.

But a proclamation of King Ludwig III of Bavaria, on August 1, dissipated all doubts as to Bavaria's stand.

Those were the days of "Gott mit uns" (God with us). The Kaiser was in the heyday of his glory. He was idolized as "der oberster Kriegsherr" (supreme war lord). All his proclamations began with: "Wir, Wilhelm II, von Gottes Gnaden, Deutscher Kaiser und Koenig von Preussen." (We, William II, by the grace of God, German emperor and King of Prussia).

The mobilization of troops lasted fully three weeks. No civilians were able to travel on trains during that entire period, for all rolling stock was needed to transport the troops to the French, Belgian and Russian frontiers.

Many Americans were stranded temporarily in Germany. Foreign banking facilities had become temporarily disarranged and Americans could not get their letters of credit acknowledged. James W. Gerard, then American Ambassador to Germany, was in a quandary to straighten out the tangle until the American Government sent the cruiser Memphis abroad with funds for the relief of stranded Americans.

When the peak of the mobilization operation was passed, civilians —worthless wretches, who merely were tolerated—were permitted to travel again.

Munich, the Bavarian capital, was seething with the excitement of war. The staccato commands of officers broke constantly through the cheers of the war crowds. The partriarchal King Ludwig III spoke triumphantly to the jubilant multitude from the balcony of his palace whenever German arms achieved a smashing victory.

These victories followed one another in dazzling succession. Liege fell. Brussels capitulated. The Germans were bombarding Antwerp and making their devastating drive for the seacoast. Soon virtually all of Belgium was in German hands.

Eastern front war news, at first, was more disquieting. The Russian general, Rennenkampf, in command of the Russian first army, had invaded East Prussia and had forced the Germans to retreat. Then, like a flash, came the news of Von Hindenberg's great victory at Tannenberg. The entire region of the Mazurian Lakes was purged of the Czar's soldiers and Russian prisoners by the hundreds of thousands were captured.

At the same time, Gen. Von Kluck's army was making its smashing drive for Paris after literally walking away with the first British expeditionary force. Already Von Kluck was within 15 miles of the French capital. It appeared as if nothing could stop the German avalanche.

It is natural that the exhilaration of the German populace mounted to the point of intoxication, "Der deutsche Geist siegt. Deutschland wird ihnen zeigen." ("The German spirit is victorious. Germany will show them.) Thus did the war orators bellow forth their paeans. Germany was at the height of its glory.

Casualty Lists Read With Fear and Anxiety.

BUT there was another side to the picture. Soon Red Cross trains were transporting thousands of wounded soldiers back home. The casualty lists published in the newspapers were perused with fear and trepidation.

Munich is situated at the foothills of the Bavarian Alps, and the roads and by-ways near Munich are interspersed with many wayside shrines. Women and girls of all classes kneeled at these shrines, all drawn thither by the democracy of sorrow.

The once hilarious Rhineland was beginning to lose its gayety, especially after many Rhineland regiments suffered gruesome losses on the western front. Among the touching soldier songs of farewell, "Stolzenfels am Rhein" was heard most frequently. Stolzenfels, a picturesque little Rhineland town, was selected as the locale of a soldier lover's pathetic parting:

O Baedchen bleibe mein,
Dies Herz es ist nur dein;
In Stolzenfels am Rhein.

This indescribably pathetic song beseeched the soldier's sweetheart to remain faithful to him, who will redeem his promise after peace is declared and hasten back to Stolzenfels on the Rhine.

Stressburg, the capital of Alsace, then German, was swamped with soldiers. It was literally an arenal. The people, usually bilingual, now spoke only German. Not a French word was heard. Fear had made the French language, in fact, everything French, taboo.

Once more Alsace and neighboring Lorraine was a battleground of the great powers as it had been for centuries. The soil of Alsace-Lorraine had run red with the blood of battle countless times. And the principal war song of Strassburg made mournful mention of this fact.

Oh, Strassburg, Oh, Strassburg, du wunderschoene Stadt,
Darinnen liegt begraben so manchere Soldat.

The mournful refrain of this song, which set forth that many a soldier lies buried in the beautiful city of Strassburg, was, alas, to ring only too true once more before the end of that titanic conflict.

But in spite of the bravery of its troops, Germany, fighting against overwhelming odds, lost the war, and was laid low by the Vae Victis Treaty of Versailles, mockingly called a peace treaty.

It was that abortive treaty that paved the way for Hitler and his Nazis and enabled them to delude the minds of a suffering people. It is the Treaty of Versailles, one of the blackest crimes in history, that gave Hitler his chance. Otherwise, Hitler still would be an obscure house painter and the world never would have heard of him.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Forest Shortage.

President Roosevelt has ordered that $75,000,000 be spent by the Government to plant a forest down through the middle of the country from Canada to Texas.

• • • •

Poems are made by men who bungle,
But only Franklin can make a jungle.

• • • •

The forest will be 1,000 miles long and 100 miles wide and is not a better housing movement for squirrels.

• • • •

It is long-distance planning to avoid the drought menace to the country's crops. But it is hard for the average man to see that far ahead, and the headache of the century is about to be experienced by Republican taxpayers as they come across with checks to create a nice, cool, leafy Democratic forest that none of them will live to see.

• • • •

Elmer Twitchell, the old-line Republican, today declared himself back of the President. "Yes, sir," said Elmer, "I'm not only for planting new forests, but I favor new rivers and higher mountains. I'm for abolishing the Mississippi and building two de luxe rivers running from East to West.

"The Mississippi's given us good service, but she ain't what she used to be and I'm for trading her in while we can still get a decent allowance.

"One of the chief reasons why the country is so dry is that our big rivers run the wrong way, and I'm for getting a few billion dollars and correcting this situation. I think we need some new mountain ranges in this country, too. A good mountain properly placed and decently maintained can do wonders toward preventing future depressions. I don't know just how to arrange it, but the brain trust can figure it out in no time.

• • • •

"That was where the Republican Administration failed; it didn't do anything about new forests, mountains and rivers. You could talk to a Republican leader till you're blue in the face and not get a single tree out of him. But the Democrats are different. Anybody can get a jungle for the asking.

• • • •

"That's where the Democrats are smart. Give the country more forests, and what do you get? More birds. And when you get more birds, what do you get? More tweet-tweets! And nothing can change a country from despondency to cheerfulness like the birds singing in the trees.

• • • •

"Yes, sir, what America needs is bigger and better forests. And if our taxes rise much higher we can all hide in 'em without crowding."

A Legal Matter.

A lawyer admits he was in constant communication with the late Mr. Dillinger while the Government was striving in every way to apprehend him. Moreover, he refuses to reveal any of the correspondence on the ground that it would violate professional ethics. Quick, Watson, the laughing gas!

Some crime student who remains anonymous sends in the suggestion that the proper headline for Public Enemy No. 1's undoing would have been: Dilly Dallied.

Hitler has forbidden the youth of Germany to give three cheers promiscuously. One cheer, dominantly nasal, is par for anybody except Adolf.

Swimmer Drowns At White Haven

Salisbury, Md., July 30 (Spl.). Lester Parker, 21, of Salisbury, drowned yesterday while swimming in the Wicomico River, at White Haven.

The body was recovered a half hour later in 14 feet of water by Parks Young, of White Haven.

Parker had gone to White Haven with a party of Salisbury youths on a fishing trip. He dived off the dock, and the swift current carried him off shore. John Gordy, another member of the party, attempted his rescue, but Parker sank without an outcry. Gordy, himself a strong swimmer, had trouble in regaining the shore.

The young writer recently returned from a tour of Europe. He now makes his home in Washington, but returns to Roanoke occasionally to visit his family. He is a graduate of Roanoke College. Hogan is reported to be at work on a new novel while visiting his family here.

Gain in Harrisonburg Rum Arrests Claimed

Harrisonburg, Va., July 30 (Spl.). Arrests for drunkenness here so far this year total 209, as compared with 140 for 1933 and arrests for drunken driving total 98 against 31. George N. Conrad, Harrisonburg attorney and leader of the Virginia dry forces, declared last night in a temperance rally at Singers Glen.

Former Senator Conrad urged that Rockingham County vote dry in the county referendum August 7. This election does not apply to Harrisonburg, where a State liquor store soon is to be established.

Sara Teasdale.

The recent death of our American lyrical poet, Sara Teasdale, was a great loss to contemporary literature. Some persons write verse and call it poetry; some write prose and call it verse; but she wrote poetry in verse.

She was born at St. Louis in 1884, was educated at the private schools in that city, and was married to Ernst B. Filsinger in 1914. She died January 29, 1933.

Her first volume of poems appeared in 1907; and the story of her life is the story of her successive compositions, the last volume of poems appearing after her death, under the title "Strange Victory."

In a period when many writers hope to attract some attention by crude manners and curious expressions, Sara Teasdale was content to write English songs in familiar meters. It is easier to attract attention by singing out of tune than by singing in tune better than others. Her work received early recognition. In 1917 she received a prize from the Poetry Society of America; in 1918 she received the Columbia University prize for the best book by an American in that year.

So far as I know, she never attempted to write a long poem, either an epic or a continued narrative. She was a solo singer, and confined her expression to brief songs, the foundation, in style always being melody rather than harmony. She could say a good deal and say it well in four lines.

Twilight.

The stately tragedy of dusk
Drew to its perfect close,
The virginal white evening star
Sank, and the red moon rose.

Although she wrote on many poetical themes, she was primarily a poet of love, and expressed the universal passion of women, all of whom know what love is, whether they have been fortunate or unfortunate, satisfied or starved.

Pity.

They never saw my lover's face,
They only know our love was brief,
Wearing awhile a windy grace
And passing like an autumn leaf.

They wonder why I do not weep,
They think it strange that I can sing,
They say, "Her love was scarcely deep

They never saw my love nor knew
That in my heart's most secret place
I pity them as angels do
Men who have never seen God's face.

A Prayer.

Until I lose my soul and lie
Blind to the beauty of the earth,
Deaf tho' a lyric wind goes by,
Dumb in a storm of mirth;

Until my heart is quenched at length
Oh, let me love with all my strength
Careless if I am loved again.

I had the privilege of knowing her well; her conversation was charming, full of humor and sparkling comment without one trace of bitterness.

More Aid Seen For Local Rule

West Virginia U. Study Visions Expanded State Support.

Charleston, W. Va., July 30 (Spl.). An expanded State administration providing greater support and supervision of local governments is foreseen by the bureau of governmental research at West Virginia University.

It lists the expansion as one of six "problems and trends" resulting from adoption of the levy limitation amendment to the State constitution fixing maximum levies upon all classes of property in the State.

In its second brochure discussing State problems, the bureau says the amendment has cut deeply into tax returns and shifted the burden of governmental support to indirect taxation such as the consumers' sales tax.

The local governments, it says, are viewing decreases in their direct property revenues and seeking "further dependence upon State action."

Two possibilities are held out by the bureau:

"Either the taking over by the State of certain local services or the support of local services from State-collected revenues."

"In the first instance," the bureau says, "local control is abolished; in the second, local discretion is curtailed.

"In either case, the active authority of the State in local affairs is considerably expanded, and the local jurisdiction finds its judgment steadily restrained."

Roanoke Man Missing; Fears Felt for Safety

Norfolk, Va., July 30 (Spl.). Fears were entertained today for the safety of Patrick Conway, 30, of Roanoke, who has been missing since noon yesterday, when he was last seen in swimming trunks on the Shore Drive, in Princess Anne County.

H. C. Hartvigsen, in whose home Conway was a guest, reported to police today that he, Conway, and several friends were swimming off the Shore Drive yesterday. When they prepared to return to the city they missed Conway.

Nothing Improves Breakfast Like Dismissing a Grouch

By Robert Quillen

In the old days there was a certain king who was very proud of his city and eager to improve it. Anything that threatened to injure his people, either mentally or physically, was quickly suppressed, and those who did something to benefit the city were richly rewarded.

One year the king decided to offer a prize of a million dollars to the citizen whose daily conversation revealed the clearest understanding of the city's needs and shortcomings and the greatest interest in its welfare.

Among the city's inhabitants were two prominent citizens named John and Bill.

John was an ordinary kind of fellow who attended to his own business and had little to say, but he noticed such things as holes in sidewalks and firetrap buildings and trash-filled alleys and did what he could to mend matters.

Bill also saw things that were wrong, and that included about everything. In fact, if he saw anything at all to commend, he kept the fact to himself.

Never once did he finish a conversation with anybody without some reference to "this lousy town."

He seldom opened his mouth without finding fault with something. The schools were no good, the teachers dumb, the churches useless, the preachers hypocritical, the police corrupt, the officials rotten, and the people themselves narow, stupid and ignorant. And every day Bill mentioned these things and added: "I'd leave the lousy place if I didn't have all my money tied up here."

Hearing him talk that way, the people said: "Bill is sure to win. He sees more faults than anybody."

Sure enough, when the king's spies reported at the end of the year, both Bill and John were called to the palace.

"Well, John," said the king, "you saw a lot of things that were wrong and made a lot of good suggestions and proved yourself a good citizen. Here's your million dollars."

"And what do I get?" demanded Bill.

"You," said the king, "get led outside the city and kicked to parts unknown. You are merely a common scold, and you poison the atmosphere. There's no other way you can improve the city so much as by leaving it."

Ruling Revives Discussion of Berkeley Race

Two-Year Dispute Over County Court Seat Still Going On.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30 (Spl.).—The two-year battle between J. C. McKown, Democrat, and William M. Johnson, Republican, for a seat on Berkeley County Court here, has been pushed into discussion again as a result of a State supreme court decision which granted a mandamus to Amos Dunham, this city, requiring that his name be listed on the official ballot for county commissioner in the August 7 primary.

The decision ends one angle of the dispute that resulted from the commissionership race in 1932, eventually declared a tie, which was broken, under a law passed at the time, by Gov. Kumps' appointment of McKown to the post.

Republicans have since contested the Democratic claim that the appointment was for the full six-year term. A majority of the ballot commissioners here declined to put Dunham's name on the ballot, and the appeal was taken.

The Republicans contended the question should be returned to the people at the first election opportunity.

The Supreme Court upheld Dunham's argument that the Governor's action filled the seat only until after the election next fall.

Republican leaders may make a further appeal to deprive McKown of his seat immediately, on the grounds the act allowing the Governor to appoint him is unconstitutional.

If they succeed McKown indicated he would have his name placed on the ballot for a "short term." Whether his name can be placed on the primary ballots, which have already been printed, is puzzling county officials.

8 Put in Dungeon, Strike Is Quelled

Danville, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—A strike at the city farm ended today when a group of disgruntled prisoners went back to work after spending the week-end in a dungeon.

Eight prisoners refused to go to work Saturday, it was learned today. They complained that they were not getting enough to eat and that it was too hot to work in the field, according to C. L. Scott, jr., director of public works. The official stated that the prisoners were being fed well and that they were not required to work in the heat of the day.

Miss Dillard Is Bride of Mr. Gamble

Romance Which Began on Shipboard Leads to Wedding.

Ceremony Takes Place at Gray Residence in Fairfax.

A shipboard romance, which began on the Europe-bound steamship Lafayette last summer, culminated in the wedding yesterday of Miss Adelaide Paul Dillard of Durham, N. C., and Mr. Howard William Gamble, of Bergenfield, N. J., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Welles Alexander Gray at Fairfax, Va. Mrs. Gray is a cousin of Mr. Gamble.

Both the bride and bridegroom's parents, and members of the bridal party from Durham and Bergenfield arrived Sunday evening at the Shoreham Hotel, together with the bridal couple, who arrived from their Southern and Northern homes, simultaneously.

In the group who came to Washington for the wedding are the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ewing Dillard; her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Dillard, of Roanoke, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Farthing, of Durham, N. C; Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Gamble, of Bergenfield, N. J., parents of the bridegroom; Mr. John D. D. Livingston and Mr. Wallace Tepper, of Englewood, N. J.; Mr. Allan Mordecai, of New York City, and the bridegroom's brother, Mr. R. H. Gamble, of Bergenfield.

A luncheon at the Gray home in Fairfax followed the wedding, and later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Gamble departed for a wedding trip. Mrs. Gamble wore a frock of blue silk crepe, with pink collar and cuffs, and hat, gloves, bag and shoes of the same color blue. The Rev. Royal A. Rice, of Fairfax, performed the wedding ceremony.

The bride attended National Park Seminary in Washington and Mr. Gamble is a graduate of Columbia University. They will make their home at 150 East Fiftieth street, New York City.

Insane or Brilliant?

In a recent Rubber game the Declarer succeeded in fulfilling a contract of three notrump by a most unusual play. This play was the lead of an honor from a tenace position in the Declarer's own hand—seemingly the height of insanity, but actually based on sound reasoning, and the only play by which the hand could have been made.

South West North East

1—A very bad Overcall, even when not vulnerable.

2—A doubtful bid. Making a free bid on a four-card suit at the level of three is a most unusual procedure. However, East can not be blamed for wishing to show some sign of life when his hand contains 2½ honor tricks and his partner has opened the bidding.

After South's Double of three clubs, North should unquestionably have opened the club 8. The North player was rather stubborn, however, and insisted on opening his own suit, laying down the diamond 6. Dummy played low, South played the nine, and the Declarer won the trick with the Ten. After a few moments of deliberation, West now made the key play of the hand, laying down the heart Queen. It is easily seen by looking at all four hands that after this lead was made the defense was helpless. They had no way of defeating East and West's contract.

West's play was not a blind sho in the dark but the result of logica thinking. West realized that if he attempted to get to Dummy to play the heart suit in a normal way, he would have to do so by leading clubs. South, he knew, was marked with the club Ace and would win the first round of clubs and lead a diamond through West's Queen, thus effectually removing West's second stopper in the diamond suit before any heart tricks were set up. It was therefore hopeless to lead clubs before hearts. From the bidding, however, the North player was marked with the heart King as, since South was marked with the club suit, North would have to have the heart King as part of the strength needed to justify the Overcall. Furthermore, if North got in at Trick 2, he would not be able to lead diamonds without giving the Declarer a third trick in that suit. From all of this reasoning, West saw that his only hope was to lay down the Queen of hearts, forcing North into the lead. North, of course, returned a club, and South, winning with the Ace, returned a diamond. Declarer won this trick with the Ace in Dummy, and now, with his heart in his throat, took a finesse against the heart Jack in the South hand. When this held and the suit broke, West was able to run nine tricks and thus fulfill his contract. A brilliant and courageous line of attack won a just reward.

Lettuce Boom Bringing New Soap to Town

It Does Just the Things Wanted Most in a Cleansing Agent.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE LETTUCE boom in California is reflected here in Washington through the sudden popularity of a new soap made from lettuce oil.

Its appearance in local shops was forecast several weeks ago. Weeks went by and still it didn't come. Always it was due "next day." After days of waiting and fruitless inquiry, it finally bobbed up—just in the nick of time.

This soap is made from a number of pure ingredients, but chiefly from the health giving oil of lettuce. It does just the things women want a soap to do. It helps cut excess oils, and thereby puts a damper on shiny noses. It actually works down into the pores and plays havoc with bits of dust and excess matter collected there.

Rainy-Day Aid for Children.

Vacation time for offsprings is apt to prove a trying, hair-raising time for parents unless they take precautions. And precautions in this instance mean providing amusement for the young hoodlums. A trip to the park, a picnic, a party—these are fine on occasions. But there's always a long, rainy day when the patter of rain on the window fails to drown the "What can I do now, Mama?"

As most parents know, just any old game won't do. It might hold interest for an hour, an afternoon—but then! As if in total sympathy with vacation-sick parents, a local store has stocked up on numerous new and different games. One of them (an unfailing success) is the microscope game. It includes a set of microscopes, a tweezer, glass masher, plate, and the other necessary parts of an apparatus for studying the infinitesimal.

With such a game at hand, even a grain of dust takes on new interest, or a drop of water, or the legs of a fly.

It's a splendid thing for children. While amusing themselves they will develop an interest in the amazing minute world about them.

• • • •

Know Your Powder.

It pays to know your powder before you buy. Good powder can be a fine protective coating while it imparts a silky texture to the skin. On the other hand, it can be like so much fine white dust with a tendency to enlarge pores.

One of the best powders on the market now is treated with herbs and sifted through satin before it is boxed. In this way, it is made totally devoid of impurities and is so fine it envelops the skin like a cloud.

The beautician who puts out this powder also puts out one which is about half price. While this is a good and pure powder, it is not as carefully sifted and is not treated with herbs. The fine powder is available in a small $1 box, or a large $3 size. The in-between is $1.65.

Something for Bottles.

A bottle opener and a rubber cap all in one. That's the newest thing in gadgets with a brand new price of 5 cents!

Keep one around and find what a saving it is. Use the opener for removing the metal cap to a sparkling beverage. Fill the glasses and then put the rubber cap on the bottle. There's no fear that the beverage will loose its spark. Keep it in the refrigerator and it will stay as good as new for a long time.

• • • •

Fragrant Powders.

For the first time the manufacturers of some well known toilet goods are putting out a dusting powder for 75 cents.

Although there has been a change in price, the quality is still the same. To match the powder there are odd shaped bottles of toilet water with the most amazing lasting powers. A bit of it here and there after the bath will retain its fragrance for hours.

Both toilet water and dusting powder are available in a variety of fragrances. One of the loveliest is gardenia. The fragrance of the real flower seems almost miraculously to have been retained.

• • • •

Windshield Cleaner.

Motorists who have noticed the handy little gadget which some filling stations use to cleanse windshields might like one for themselves. It's a small square rubber sponge that does the most enlightening things when rubbed over the glass. The reason lies within. A soapy powder has been inclosed in the sponge so every time it is dampened, enough oozes out to do a fine job of cleansing.

It's one of the handiest things yet for windshields, but it's equally good for windows and mirrors. In fact, it cleanses about everything that has to be cleansed. And it costs only one dime.

Corn the Foundation Of Many Fine Dishes

If Eaten Just Off the Ear, Use Plenty of Butter; but There Are Many Other Delightful Ways of Serving It.

By Anne Barrett.

IF YOU LIKE fresh corn as much as sports-writer Grantland Rice does, you'll likely be glad to eat it just off the ear—with plenty of butter.

If the corn is fresh and sweet, and cooked only briefly, most people think that is the best way. Briefly means not more than 5 minutes (in boiling water, without salt) if the corn is fresh from the garden. Surely not more than 12 minutes, if it's good corn bought in the market.

But if you can get plenty of green corn, you may like to serve it other ways, too. Perhaps in corn pancakes, corn pudding, or a grand corn chowder. You can make all of these dishes with canned corn, when fresh corn isn't handy. For example, here's how to make corn pancakes.

Corn Pancakes.

These start with 1 cup corn (cut from cob, or canned corn—drained). Add 2 tablespoons melted butter and 2 egg-yolks well-beaten. Next, sift together ¾ cup flour, ¾ teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Stir this into first mixture. Then fold in 2 egg-whites, stiffly beaten. Bake just as you would ordinary pancakes; and serve with broiled ham, or bacon.

Corn Chowder.

For corn chowder, which makes a perfect supper dish (followed by a good salad), start with 3 tablespoons diced salt pork (or bacon) in a heavy skillet. Fry out this pork till crisp. Then remove it and cook ¼ cup finely-cut (or sliced) onion in pork fat till onion turns yellow. Next add 2 cups diced raw potatoes, 2 cups boiling water and 2 cups corn (fresh or canned). Cook gently till potatoes are tender. Then stir in 3¾ cups of milk. When this has heated through, stir in 2 tablespoons flour, first mixed smooth in ¼ cup cold milk. Season to taste, add 1 tablespoon butter and serve over crackers in big soup bowls.

Send for Berry Recipes.

Berries are another food item that folks like to make the most of, while they are in season. One newest bulletin, "15 Good Berry Dishes," gives favorite recipes such as: Blackberry pie, gooseberry pie, raspberry-currant pie, blueberry pie, blueberry muffins, pancakes and puddings and kuchen, blackberry cobbler, raspberry-currant ice, blackberry cordial, raspberry shrub, and others. To get this bulletin promptly, please be sure to send 6 cents in loose stamps with self-addressed envelope and coupon below.

If July 31 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m., and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

Outside business activities on this date are rather dubious as to results. Office activities may prove more gratifying and be productive of ideas, which put into practice might terminate in some successful deals. Telephone conversations may be overheard, so caution should be exercised if confidential matters are being discussed. If precaution is exercised in answering letters a mixup may be prevented that otherwise might prove costly. Rumors of a detrimental nature may be buzzed around on this date, and it might be advisable to investigate their accuracy before repeating them. If you should be tempted to neglect business to indulge in some form of social conviviality, do not be surprised, if you pay a high price for your fun. Lovers may be swayed by their environment and circumstances in the evening, so care must be exercised if favorable results are desired.

If a woman and July 31 is your birthday, you may be inclined to give more thought to having a good time than to earning the wherewith-all essential to provide it. Cultivating the habit of giving daily thought to the serious side of life might prove to great help in advancing your future financial security. You are gifted in many ways, and capable of making a great success out of anything to which you seriously apply yourself. Both women and men are readily attracted to you, and if you desire to do so you can usually influence them. In matters pertaining to love, you should prove most fortunate. Whether married or single, you will always get a great deal of pleasure out of life, and find it worthwhile living.

The child born on July 31, when it reaches school age, will require being taught to control hasty impulses, as well as its temper. This child, in other respects, will give little or no trouble, and should make its parents feel proud.

If a man and July 31 is your birthday, if you only learn "that haste makes waste," and do a little more deliberating where business matters are involved, your success in life should be pronounced. A wife with a calm temperament might prove invaluable to you, especially if you will listen to her advice.

A Law Requiring Deaf To Attend School Urged

New York, July 29 (Spl.).—Uniform State laws requiring the attendance of deaf children between the ages of 6 and 18 in schools for the deaf were urged yesterday by Dr. Percival Hall, president of Gallaudet College, when he addressed the convention of the National Association of the Deaf, in session here.

In these schools a flexible combination of lip reading, the sign language, and manual alphabet should be taught, declared Dr. Hall. He also asserted deaf teachers make the best instructors in schools for the deaf.

Building With Toothpicks and Dried Peas Teaches Muscular Control.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

IN THE DAYS before kindergartens were equipped with a wealth of educational toys, small hands were kept busy making furniture of toothpicks and dried peas. This occupation still provides entertainment, and is suitable for home play.

Take dried peas and soak them in water until they are puffed to their full size, but not long enough to sprout. Take four toothpicks and make them into a square by sticking them at right angles into four peas; there you have the seat of a chair. Stick four more toothpicks in for the legs, clipping off the points at the lower end so the chair will stand more securely. Three sticks, joined with two peas at the top, make the back.

Tables, sofas, beds, all sorts of household furniture can be made in this manner. Besides providing entertainment, this type of pastime helps clumsy little hands to grow more agile, teaches little fingers muscular control.

(Saturday: A Sandbox Mother Built).

Readers can help other mothers by passing on, through this column, ideas that they have found helpful in bringing up children. Names will not be published if correspondents so indicate. Address Alice Fox Pitts in care of The Washington Post.

Travel Print Dresses Good For Stay-at-Home Apparel

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Just why they are called "travel" prints is hard to say. Because those fine-patterned mixture materials which you find making neat, tailored dresses are practical for so many stay-at-home things.

To be sure many smart women do use them for travel. And they are certainly fine for it. From their mixture yarns they get a sturdy look but a quite light feel. They also have the virtue of not crushing badly when sat on for a long time at a stretch.

Small Patterns.

The patterns are small and closely spaced so they don't reveal the grime and stain of travel the way plain fabrics so often do.

Some of the neatest of the prints are the fine checks or designs which look like checks at first glance but turn out to be half checks or broken line checks.

Small irregular edged blocks or squares are used, and half squares. Stripes are liked and often they are used going in two directions . . . up-and-down and across a dress.

There are any number of irregular shaped, rather geometric figures and some of the patterns simulate tweeds and worsteds of the men's suiting variety.

The prints themselves and the styles they are made up into are so tailored looking that they are quite as popular for general daytime and street wear or for a dress to wear to the office as they are for traveling.

Suit or Coat Look.

They make specially good looking suit-like dresses, often two-piece (or simulated two-piece). Coat dresses are another excellent style for them and it is a coat dress with scarf neckline which is sketched.

And they are also effective in tailored one-piece dresses with interesting bow or scarf neckline treatements. Or with those lighter touches at the neckline which are so flattering and so fashionable.

Travel-print dresses of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

Paris Hints Slim Profile This Winter

PARIS.—A SLENDER silhoutte with fairly narrow skirts may mark winter fashions, Paris hears.

Though doors are still locked on the secret of the Paris profile, reports from the workrooms of several big houses hint at a slim, slender line. Waistlines and day necks are apt to remain normal, say many of the reports, but where the hemline will be is still an unsolved riddle. Stylists say it may not change radically.

The influence of the directoire period which followed the French revolution is another style prognostication for 1934-35. Stylists profess to see a parallel between the present period and the time of Napoleon's directorate following the troubled days which ended the reign of Louis XVI.

Slit Skirts Seen.

The slit skirts for both night and day and the very low evening decolletes which appeared in the 1790's are already seen in the mode, they point out, and they and other directoire fashions may well be repeated this winter.

Combinations of color and material promise to be an outstanding note in the new 1934-35 mode. With many of the new fabrics showing two and often three colors and materials in one weave, designers hint at interesting effects in new models.

There are wools of one color worked with blobs of mohair of another hue, "frosted" with rabbit hairs, or shimmering metal threads. There are afternoon crepes and failles with chenille stripes or dots and pale evening crepes striped with a contrasting color and with a metal thread. Most of the new fabrics are characterized by a mossy or cloque weave which gives an uneven surface, and by a heavy drapable quality. Lame effects to be one of the outstanding of the season.

Brown Is Prominent.

After black, brown in a warm, reddish shade promises to be the most prominent day color this winter. Greens, ranging from almond and a brisk grass to bottle, wine reds and very warm grays are also heralded as important hues.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Foul Breath.

Recent investigations have shown that most cases of foul breath have their origin in putrefaction that is taking place on a badly coated tongue. The anterior or front part of the tongue may appear clean, but on looking at the back part a thick fur like coating may be observed, the color varying from dirty gray to brown. One may easily test for the presence of decomposition by rubbing the back surface of the tongue with a handkerchief covered finger. If decomposition is present particles adhering to the handkerchief, will have an offensive odor and strict attention must then be given to mouth hygiene in order to remove the cause.

As the result of an examination of 500 persons with foul breath, it was learned that in 90 per cent the cause could be traced to the tongue.

Proper mouth hygiene demands attention to tonsils, teeth, gums, and particularly coated tongue. The following procedure, suggested by George L. Grapp, will be found to be of value in cases of foul breath:

1. Removal of coating on the tongue by gentle scraping with a very soft rubber brush. This may be required several times daily. The procedure takes but a minute and should be done before and after each meal. Care should be taken not to use force.

2. Once or twice daily the infected portion of the tongue should be covered with an antiseptic that contains chlorine. This is best prepared by the druggist using a neutral, nonabsorbable jelly to which a small amount of Dakin's solution has been added. This may be flavored with some pleasant tasting oil. The application may be made by means of the soft rubber tongue brush.

Reports indicate that marked improvement follows this plan of mouth hygiene.

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

Fleeing from Russia after years of hardship under Soviet regime, Tatiana Tchernavin, her husband and son trekked across Arctic wastes to Finland. Today's installment of this fact story continues with their hazardous journey.

AT FIRST we walked fairly cheerfully, hoping that the sun would come out again. We were fearfully thirsty. We had been tramping for five hours without food or drink or rest through swampy ground, rising steeply uphill. We did not feel like eating sugar or bacon. It would have been nice to have some mushrooms but so far the boy comforted himself by merely pointing to their pretty red caps that were showing everywhere in the white moss. When he found one growing in his path he stroked it and whispered something to it affectionately. In this alien wild expanse mushrooms that he had gathered as a small child seemed like old friends to him.

The sun did not come out. The sky was a uniform white. It was impossible to trace the course of the river that lost itself in the swamps; the ridge that we had seen from the distance disappeared behind the nearer hills; we could not tell whether the slope that we were climbing had imperceptibly led us in the wrong direction.

I was feeling so wretched that I was afraid to go near the others. It was I who had ruined them by losing the compass. I was suffering agonies of remorse.

Where were we to go now, when there was no sun to guide us?

Camp Pitched.

My husband was hesitating; he led us sometimes uphill as though hoping to see something in the distance, sometimes came lower, wondering if he could hear the sound of the river which apparently turned to the south.

At last he took one more look at the sky. The clouds had come still lower and crept over the tops of the fir trees, scattering tiniest drops of moisture over us.

"We can not go on," he said. "It's comparatively dry here. Wait for me, I'll go and find a place to camp in."

He soon found a good fir tree. It was in a lovely spot: fluffy white moss covered the ground, tiny bushes of whortleberry with big bluish berries looked like an embroidery on it; the red-capped mushrooms were big as in fairy books; the magnificent fir trees had a silvery sheen on their soft green needles. Our fir tree was so exactly like the others and had such thick spreading branches that we could not be seen under it at a distance of ten paces. The ground underneath, soft with the fallen needles, was dry and smooth, and the place looked remarkably cozy.

Child Chattered.

The child cheered up at once and chattered away:

"Daddy, it's a good thing we stopped, isn't it? We've come a good way today. And the rest will do my foot good, won't it? Perhaps it will get quite well. Don't you think it might?"

"Yes, dear, certainly. But I wonder if I shall find any water here. And if we go lower down we shall be in a swamp again."

"No, don't let us go into a swamp. We can manage without water. I am not a bit thirsty, I was eating whortleberries, they are quite wet and the drops on them taste awfully good. I'll pick some for you, mother. You go to sleep, and I'll go and get some presently."

I lay down, covering my head with the faithful mackintosh, and the father and the son began a long, friendly conversation, sitting very close to each other.

His father was telling him about his own happy childhood, about journeys by train and by steamer, and the good things one could get to eat at the stations. Then he told him of his expeditions in the mountains, of how he had learned to find his way by the sun and the trees.

Bearings Taken.

The day rose but there was not a trace of the sun. The father and the son went to have a look round and brought nearly half a saucepanful of large, moist whortleberries. We sprinkled them with sugar and ate them. Now my husband lay down and I walked about watching for the sun. The sky was white all over. I kept glancing up every two or three minutes, but there was no change. Suddenly I noticed a slight movement in the clouds. They lifted and began to part.

"Shall we wake daddy?" the boy asked eagerly.

"Wait a minute."

"Run and wake daddy."

We took our bearings: the valley which led us south the day before, now turned to the west. Further on it turned again, but anyway we could not be certain of our direction for several hours at a time.

Overjoyed, we hastily made ready and walked down toward the river. The bank was overgrown with luxuriant vegtation; a mass of brightly colored beetles and butterflies came out in the sunshine.

We drank some cold water, which tasted good after 24 hours without a drink, and climbed up once more so as not to follow the course of the river which made a large loop.

There had once been a forest fire here: the ground was covered with charred trunks and between them a few tall pine trees stood out.

Nature in these parts lives its own life, going through catastrophes, healing its wounds and hastening to grow masses of flowers and berries while the sun is in the sky for 24 hours on end. But it is no place for man; the virgin forest seems to resent intruders.

"I wish I had a gun, we should have had a fine supper," my husband said with a sigh.

It was very nice walking along the slope, but the river turned sharply to the north.

"We'll have to cross the river. I wish I had thought of it earlier. It may be too deep here," my husband said.

Water Icy.

"But I can swim across, daddy. Only how will mother manage? She doesn't swim very well."

"I, too, can swim if it's not too far. Don't you be so superior."

We came down to the bank. Again the ground grew marshy, willow bushes were in the way, mosquitoes buzzed.

"The water is sure to be icy, I am afraid you'll both catch cold."

"Nonsense, and, anyway, we shall have a good wash. We haven't had a bath for six days."

The boy did not share my feelings in this respect. He rather enjoyed not having to wash or brush his teeth.

My husband went into the water first. It was up to his waist from the first and soon he had to raise above his head the knapsack which he carried in his arms. The water was foaming all round him. We watched his every step.

"The water will be up to my neck," said the boy.

"It will be up to my shoulders, but the current is so strong I shan't be able to carry anything."

"Now it's shallower; he is nearly over."

"He is coming back; make haste and undress. Put your clothes into a bundle, the boots, too, and mind you don't lose your socks."

"Mother, mosquitoes!"

"Never mind, they won't touch you in the water."

His father took him across, defending him with his body against the strong current, then came back for me, and crossed the river twice again carrying over our things. The water was icy, and he was shaking with the cold.

"Make haste and dress, we mustn't be long here, it's too exposed," he said.

"Mother, you are not hurrying!"

"Yes, I am."

"You are washing your face!"

"You'd better do the same!"

"No, I won't. I'll wash it when we come to Finland."

Very reluctantly he lifted his mosquito net and dabbed water on his nose and mouth, blue with the whortleberries.

"Lamplighter Larry" Still Has a Job

CHICAGO, July 30 (U.P.).—"Larry the Lamplighter," familiar figure of the gay nineties, isn't a thing of the past. Only a few miles away from the ultra-modern electrical displays at A Century of Progress and even closer to the brilliantly illuminated loop Chicago has 575 gasoline lamps and 4,897 gas lamps, necessitating the employment of a score of 1934 "Larrys."

Scanty funds, according to William A. Jackson, who is in charge of the city's electrical bureau, is the reason for maintaining the lamps.

"We would like to replace them," he said, "but for this purpose have only a $5,000 appropriation in the 1934 budget. That would give about one new light to each of the 50 wards. Until tax collections are normal it is likely that we'll continue to have gasoline lamps."

Each of the gas lamps has a pilot light and is controlled by an automatic time switch. But for the gasoline lamps it is necessary to employ about 20 men, who travel about before dark with a ladder and a torch to light them—just like the original Larry had to do. Quite a few of the modern lamplighters, however, make their rounds in automobiles — something the Larry of the nineties merely dreamed about.

Organ Recital Set For Y.W.C.A. Group

Continuing "Know Your Capital City" Tour.

WITH "Know Your Capital City" as its motto, the Tuesday Evening Group of the Y. W. C. A. has been too much interested this summer in learning about Washington to worry about the vaulting mercury.

Under the leadership of Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, widely known Washington lecturer, two dozen young women have alternated weekly meetings on the roof of the Y. W. C. A. with weekly pilgrimages to local points of interest.

Tonight at 7 o'clock they will attend an organ recital at the Church of the Latter Day Saints, after which they will be conducted through the church.

At 8 o'clock they will be received at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart. Two more meetings remain on schedule. Tuesday, Miss Drake will discuss "The Paintings the Public Chose as the Best in the Louvre."

American Coed Called Physically Perfect

The American coed has a new champion in S. P. B. Mais, an Englishman, who recently visited this country.

"Physically," he wrote in a recent edition of the Listener, London, "the girls in the coeducational universities struck me as perfect. They dress with taste; they are easy to look at and amazingly easy to talk to. I wish our young people could acquire this ease of manner. I have still to meet a gauche American girl. They have achieved poise without sophistication, which is an admirable trait. My stay has convinced me that coeducational universities are certainly the best for women, whatever the effect may be on the men."

Desperadoes Breed in Slums, New York City Survey Shows

NEW YORK, July 30 (Spl.).—That the most vicious types of crime are initiated and fostered in the slum sections is revealed by a recent survey of the slums in Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Announcing the results of the survey, Langwell W. Post, Tenement House Commissioner, called for slum abolition.

"This report constitutes a new and startling indictment of slum sections," Mr. Post said. "They spread a deadly crime virus throughout the entire city."

The survey was undertaken by Irving W. Halpern, chief of the probation department of General Sessions Court; John N. Stanislaus, of that department, and Assistant District Attorney Bernard Botein. Mr. Stanislaus supervised the work of 200 investigators, analysts and statisticians provided through financial aid from the Civil Works Administration.

"Behind the Dillingers and the Diamonds, the Gerald Chapmans and the Pretty Boy Floyds, there stand the slums," Mr. Post said in his report. "As long as we leave them there we make a futile gesture indeed when we pass our sawed-off shotguns to our police, tighten our laws, hand out longer sentences, and generally concern ourselves with the problem at only one end, the suppression of the finished criminal.

"His suppression is necessary and should be vigorous, but sooner or later we must come face to face with the great forces that originally start the criminal on his antisocial path."

"One-third of all the felons convicted for the entire city during the survey year 1930, came from these Manhattan slums," Mr. Post observed. "These areas show consistently high rates for juvenile delinquency, and there is a very close correlation in each area between the juvenile delinquency rate, and the rate of arrests and convictions for more serious crimes. The majority of the children who ran away from home during the survey period came from the Manhattan slums—certainly suggesting that these youthful citizens sought to escape from intolerable conditions."

The Heat Angers Bees And They Go on Strike

Kenton, Ohio, July 29 (U.P.).—A half million bees here have gone on strike because of the heat. They attacked keepers, refused to toil, and resorted to sabotage. They attacked melting hives and toppled them to the earth.

W. A. Shadley, Hardin County farmer, said today that the bees in his 15 colonies were on a rampage. A hundred thousand toilers, it seems, perished in their own honey when it melted and drowned them. Resisting all efforts at arbitration, the bees in the Shadley colonies were 100 per cent drones today.

Education Offers Wide Field for Success to Woman Who Selects Her Life's Work After 40

Code for Domestics, Housewives Wanted

Girls Complain of Never-Ending Duties and Inhumane Treatment; Employers Report Insolence, Indolence and Dishonesty.

By Elizabeth Young.

NO CODE for housewives and domestics?

"No code for housewives and domestics," Mrs. Elizabeth Shirley Enochs, director of publicity of the Children's Bureau, regretfully shook her head.

"Just mention such a thing, and you have all the housewives and housekeepers in the country agog."

Not but what such a code is needed, she tells you, ruffling meanwhile through a depressing collection of reports and statistics. NRA codes stopped young girls from working long hours in factories and sweatshops. But did it pave the way to domestic serfdom?

Reports coming into the Children's Bureau from subsidiary junior placement agencies throughout the country show the wind is blowing in that direction.

Take New York State alone. Whereas in March, 1930, housework represented only 7 per cent of occupational opportunities open to girls of 14 to 16, in 1933 it had grown to 79 per cent.

Difficulties Ensue.

This shift is bringing with it an endless train of difficulties, the Children's Bureau records. These difficulties are due in part to lack of standardization in housework jobs and to housewives who, seeking cheap help, are hiring adolescents in ever-increasing numbers. These hirelings have neither the strength nor the training to do acceptably the work expected of them.

The girls complain of long hours, never-ending duties, inhumane treatment, lack of privacy and poor pay. Housewives complain of insolence, indolence, irresponsibility, dishonesty and incompetency.

"There is overwhelming evidence on every hand," they report, "to show that to an increasing degree housewives are expecting of these young, immature, untrained workers an amount of work out of all proportion either to their strength or their ability.

In a Nutshell.

"Indeed, one employer has put the situation in a nutshell.

"When she called for a 'mother's helper,' the interviewer asked, 'You expect her just to help you? 'Well, not exactly,' was the reply. 'I'll help the girl.'"

That the girl is likely to need help is indicated by a report of her duties handed in by one domestic of less than 16 years. It read:

"Had to help prepare the meals, make beds, wash dishes, do the family washing and ironing twice a week, including 12 shirts every week for the man of the family. Wipe up and polish all the floors on my hands and knees every day, Wash windows and woodwork and take the baby out for an hour or so in the afternoon.

"Then last night they gave another late party. At the last minute they found they needed some coffee. The grocery is two blocks away. I had gone to bed at 11 o'clock. Mrs. S. came and woke me up and made me dress and go to the store for coffee. I quit."

Reports show the promise of a room of one's own to the "live-in" domestic usually takes the form of a cot in the foyer, kitchen, dinette or living room, with the occasional offer of an alcove or even a bath room.

Salaries vary. Numerous offers of $2 and $2.50 a week, and $10 to $15 a month are recorded. Most of the girls insist on a minimum of $20 a month, however, although many complain of being paid irregularly, and, occasionally, not at all.

One girl reported:

"When I went to see Mrs. A. about a job she asked me to wash and wipe a big stack of dishes and sweep the floors in two large rooms. She said she wanted to see whether I knew how to work. When I asked her for my pay, she said she always tried girls out that way and wouldn't pay me a cent."

Tales of underfeeding are told. Families order chops for themselves, none for the servants. Instead of meat and potatoes after a hard day's work, a girl may get a glass of milk.

What can the Children's Bureau do about all this?

"All we can do," said Mrs. Enochs, "is to arouse public opinion. Our job is to let the country at large know the situation as it is told to us. Our business is to keep in touch with what is going on."

Miss Katherine Lenroot, acting director of the Children's Bureau, said:

"All this emphasizes the importance of strengthening school attendance laws; of seeing children under 16 get the proper training in school, instead of leaving classrooms to enter occupations so obviously unsuited to their age and their strength."

Preparation Treated.

"Better wages or better working conditions can hardly be hoped for," says its report, "until girls can be sent out who have at least a minimum of preparation for the housework job itself. Any solution of the whole problem, therefore, would seem to involve better standards so far as the work itself is concerned, and systematic training for prospective household employes as well."

And in Buffalo, N. Y., with the co-operation of the Y. W. C. A. and the public schools, the placement bureau is conducting a training school for housemaids.

Twenty girls are given an eight-week course in the essentials of housework, with emphasis on those things younger girls are most frequently called upon to do. This includes four weeks' instruction in care of bathroom and kitchen, with proper use of cleaning materials; washing, ironing, bedmaking, use of various household appliances. Then comes two weeks' schooling in child care—bathing, feeding, story telling—followed by two weeks in cooking and serving.

Meantime, a local committee has been active in a campaign to educate housewives to a better standard in housework.

"Only by some such systematic plan of procedure as this," reports the New York bureau, "can the constant complaints of both the girls and their employers be ended. The job itself must be standardized and put on some sort of business-like basis and girls be specifically trained for this type of work. Then, and then only, will the general stigma so frequently attached to housework become a thing of the past and satisfied girls and satisfied employers become a possibility."

Underwood & Underwood.

Harris & Ewing

Two Washingtonians' Careers Prove Age Inconsequential

Mrs. Mary C. Lewis Is Cofounder of World's First Hotel Training School; Dr. F. M. Butts a Leader in Teaching.

Records of eminent women listed in "Who's Who in America" prove most of them first won success after 40.

The majority of these, however, selected their life's work in youth. What, then, of the woman who begins a career at the age when most of her career-sisters are beginning to arrive? What are her chances to achieve distinction? Are her liabilities too numerous? Her assets too few?

This is the second in a series of articles about women who have proved "life begins at 40."

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SUCCESS may come to the woman after 40 either as a result of conscious effort or by accident.

Stories of middle-aged women who have forged ahead, from youth, toward a set goal are almost commonplace. Rarer are the stories of women who drifted into a career after 40.

Yet this was true of Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, cofounder and vice president of the Lewis Hotel Training Schools, established in Washington in 1916, the original school of its kind in the world.

"Life began at 40 for me," said Mrs. Lewis, "for at about that age I did a real 'switching of horses in midstream,' and found my life's work."

Reared in Hotel Atmosphere.

Born and reared in the fascinating atmosphere of hotels, married to a hotel man, and loving every intricate problem that constitutes life in any hotel, she faced financial reverses with her husband, who, in her words, "didn't recognize defeat except as a stepping stone to better things."

"A chance suggestion that the hotel industry should have trained workers," she continued, "led to the idea of a vocational school in which to train them.

"Such an institution must have textbooks, and at that time there were none on the subject, not even in the Library of Congress. Consequently, writing textbooks was one of my first tasks. Doing that, teaching mature men and women, and helping to build a school that numbers its students all over the world, has proved a thrilling adventure."

Mrs. Lewis said many women past 40 had entered the school to be trained and had later made enviable records in the hotel business.

Success in Middle Age.

"Some of our most noteworthy students were middle-aged when they enrolled," she said.

She cited Mrs. Nancy E. Brown, who was 57 when she decided to change her work from dressmaking to being an institutional executive. She is now a successful administrative housekeeper at the Leland Home for the Aged at Waltham, Mass.

Another pupil, Mrs. Ethel Miller, was past 40 when she became manager of the attractive Library Plaza Hotel in Evanston, Ill. It was the first time she had ever held a position of this type. Still another pupil, Mrs. M. Hope Sentz, was a widow of 44 when she went into this type of work. She is now executive housekeeper of the Miami-Biltmore Hotel, Coral Gables, Miami Fla.

A public singer and concert manager for a number of years, Mrs. Ruth Deming later became a teacher. At middle age, however, she obtained a position as traveling supervisor of the Grace Line steamships.

"Teaching women of this type has convinced me 40 is a grand age to start one's life work," Mrs. Lewis went on. "Given a sound body, a sense of humor and a goal, the woman of 40 brings to a career qualities the younger woman can not possess."

Does youth, then, have any great advantage over age? Do mature judgment and knowledge of human nature outweigh youth's traditional vantage points—physical energy, enthusiasm, and love of adventure?

The career of Dr. Frances Moon Butts, of Washington, seems to constitute an affirmative answer to the latter question. Furthermore, it is another link in the proof that life can begin at 40.

Did Many Things Before.

While residing in West Virginia, Dr. Butts had done many things. She had taught, assisted her physician husband in emergency operations and helped to organize both a telephone stock company and a bank.

But she was past 40 before she began writing the textbooks that are now gaining international recognition for her.

After the death of her husband she came to Washington and entered George Washington University, where she received an A. M. degree after she was 40. Four years later she had earned the degree of doctor of philosophy at American University. Shortly afterward, she accepted a position in the D. C. school system, later being made head of the department of business practice at McKinley High School.

Her Book Widely Used.

"And that's when my master's thesis came in handy," she said. "I expanded it into a book called 'Reach-Touch Typewriting,' which I used in my classes."

This book is now an adopted text in the Washington schools and is also widely used in colleges and high schools throughout the United States. Futhermore, it was used as a basis for the new system of touch-typewriting recently introduced in Turkey.

Teaching and writing, however, have not absorbed all of this remarkable woman's time. Since 40 she has spent a term in the Netherlands University of Commerce, she has prepared and presented international programs on commercial and economic education at Geneva, Honolulu, and Dublin, and she has devoted much time to club work, being an officer in a number of organizations including the World Federation of Education Associations.

Last summer she lectured at Oxford, England. This summer she is collaborating on the arrangement of a new course in commercial and economic education for Cuba.

"Yes, I've found a number of things to occupy my time since 40," she said, while modestly recounting a few of the things she has accomplished. "Yet," she added, eyes twinkling, "I can remember the day I was 30, I felt I was on the threshold of old age and that my life was virtually finished."

Young Army Idea to Curb Delinquency

NEW YORK, July 30 (Spl.).—Delinquency and disrespect for law and order can be greatly reduced by organizing children between 10 and 14 years of age in a National youth movement for cleanliness and sanitation, believes Col. Ralph C. Tobin, executive director of the Citizens' Budget Commission.

Col. Tobin, commander of the Seventh Regiment, 107th Infantry, New York National Guard, is planning to organize school children into a young army that will work toward keeping the streets as clean as a military camp.

Known as the Clean City Crusaders, the organization will be conducted along military lines, with youthful corporals, captains and other officers. several children living in the same block will be responsible for the cleanliness of that block.

"By teaching children proper respect for law and order, we will greatly reduce vandalism, delinquency and disrespect for authority, now prevalent," declared Col. Tobin.

The colonel plans to organize the crusaders on playgrounds, within the next few days.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: What can a girl do who is desperately in love with a fine man who seems to love her, but never asks her to marry him. Five years ago I started going with a man. Although he was 23 at the time, I was his first real girl, and he was my first steady beau.

He is the quiet, serious type, who had never paid much attention to girls. He is interested in aviation, likes the out-doors and spends most of his vacations roughing it out West. He is head of his own business, and in a position to marry if he wanted to.

* * * *

For four years we were together almost constantly. We had dates at least three times a week, and he always took me to and from work in his car. Then another girl rushed him and took him away from me for almost a year. Her best girl friend was going with his closest man friend. Her girl friend had never liked me much. We are different types. She and this other girl are very modern.

* * * *

When I learned he was going with this other girl on the nights he wasn't with me, I was so hurt and disgusted I told him to count me out. He was stubborn and silent and offered no explanation. We went our separate ways, and I tried to forget him.

* * * *

About six weeks ago this man came to see me. He told me only that he never expected to see this other girl again; that he would like to come back to me on the old basis. I was afraid not to take the chance of winning him back. So now I am seeing him again, just as much as ever. But things can never be the same for me. I am almost as lonely with him as I was that year without him. It's because I know the only relationship for me with him is marriage.

Please tell me what to do.

ANNA.

Clarify the Issue.

DEAR ANNA. It's easy enough to advise you what to do. The hard thing will be doing it. Put the man out of your life. And don't ever consider letting him in again, unless he proposes marriage.

Tell him, without heroics, that of your own choice you have let him be the person of first importance in your life for five years. He knows that, so it will carry the ring of truth, and give weight to subsequent statements.

* * *

Tell him you've decided to waste no more of your youth on a relationship which holds no hope of fruition into marriage and home and family. Plain words, yes. But coyness would be worse than useless in this situation.

* * * *

There may be a deep-rooted emotional kinship between you. It may have taken the year's attachment to another kind of girl to open the man's eyes to this fact. He had no measuring stick before, inasmuch as you were "his first real girl," as you say.

* * * *

Apparently he has decided he prefers you to the other girl and the type of girl she represents. But it is up to you to discover to him and for yourself just how necessary you are to him. How he reacts when learning you are permanently breaking off the association of your own will and accord, will reveal this. If he lets you go, you will be sparing yourself more wasted years of agonizing uncertainty. If, unaware, he loves you enough to want to keep you in his life, he will propose marriage.

Men Believe Naturalness Real Beauty

By Frances Mangum.

Women may regard cheeks flaming with rouge, or lips scarlet caked with a certain degree of leniency. But not men! "We may have to put up with them," they say, "but we don't have to like them!"

The chief things they seem to take exception to are:

1. Beaded mascara. 2. Fussy hair. 3. Too much lipstick. 4. Gaudy fingernails.

One man said he was all for mascara and even eyebrow pencil providing it was applied artistically. He didn't mind mascara being apparent just so long as it wasn't caked and beaded.

No Excuse for Either.

Nowadays there is no excuse for either. There are dozens of mascaras so perfected that just the least little bit will do a fine job of darkening. Many of these are waterproof and will not smudge. One of the finest is built around an eyelash ointment and is said to be beneficial to the lashes.

Fussy hair is the besetting sin of coiffures. There is no woman in all the world who looks better with her hair fussed around her face than she does with it carefully groomed. If she wants curls, let her have curls. But no fine kinks! The best way to find a really satisfactory headress is to visit a hairdresser who will speak the truth. If he knows his business and is reasonably frank he can give worthwhile advice—and constructive help.

Most Consultation Free.

Consultations with hairdressers do not as a usual thing cost a cent. And one is not necessarily obligated to have work done. It's amazing how few women take advantage of these consultations.

Too much lipstick offends the masculine sensibilities quicker than almost anything else. It symbolizes artificiality to men. To women it is carelessness. In an endeavor to put on lipstick that will not come off within the next hour they frequently put on too much at one time. And of course it looks that way.

Gaudy fingernails. That is a topic in itself. Briefly, fingernails are considered in best taste when they are conservative—particularly for daytime wear. On the beach, for evening, or the cocktail hour, it is permissible to treat them in gypsy style and wear colors from pink to sea green. But for most occasions, nails a natural pink are much to be preferred.

Strictly Speaking

2. Who is Austria's present Chancellor?
3. Whom did Chancellor Hitler recently appoint to succeed the recalled Kurt Reith as minister to Austria?
4. What is the name for the Fascist soldiers of Austria?
5. What is the pronunciation for the upper house of parliament in Germany? The lower house?

1. Prince von Starhemberg (pfun STAR-em-bark) is now vice chancellor of Austria.
2. Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg—(Koort SHEWSH-nigg).
3. Franz von Papen—(Pfun POP-en).
4. The Fascist Heimwhr—(Hime-vare).
5. The upper house of the German parliament is called the Reichrat—(RIKES-rot). The lower house is the Reishstag—(RIKE-stag).

Roller Skating Takes Place as Serious Sport

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

ROLLER skating, a short time ago, was merely a novelty when a stunt was needed for an evening, and an everlasting nuisance when small boys got underfoot.

Now it has been dignified by a championship.

The words, "silver skates," have a flavor of Hans Brinker and the frozen canals of Holland, a romantic flavor of moonlight and clear ice. Romance is somewhat scrambled by their latest use: the Silver Roller Skate Derby.

This annual event, recently run off in New York City, drew 5,000 entrants and, less surprisingly, about 50,000 spectators. In preparation for it, a carnival of roller skating broke out under the placid noses of Central Park nursemaids.

In an age of sport, roller skating is beginning to take itself seriously. After all, there must be one good reason for cement walks in a park.

Here and there in towns and cities, young people and older people may be seen roller skating, cheepishly, brazenly, sometimes disastrously. The increase in interest is rather a threat to the town fathers, who are getting demands for better paving.

Literally, requests are being made for bigger and better expanses of concrete, supposedly for the use of skate-minded children in sundry towns, but actually for the discreet use of their elders.

Roller skating, as a serious and worthy sport, is beginning to emerge into the light of day.

WITH ROLLER SKATING gaining impetus as a National pastime, city fathers are hearing demands for bigger and better expanses of concrete. Sedate young ladies, discreet elders, have taken up this sport once reserved to small boys in springtime.

Impersonal Attitude of Doctors Criticized in Physician's Book

WAKE FOREST, N. C., July 29 (AP).—Medical specialists of impersonal attitude, who are interested in their patients only from a scientific standpoint, are criticized in a recently published book by Dr. Thurman D. Kitchen, physician and president of Wake Forest College.

"Physicians have been so busy diagnosing and preventing disease that the individual harboring the disease has been almost forgotten," he wrote in "The Doctor and Citizenship."

"Of course it is presupposed that doctors should know all there is to be known about the scientific side of medicine, the latest in diagnosis and treatment; but even this is not enough, since the reason for any of it to be done at all was, is and always will be, the patient."

His thesis is that a good doctor must be more than an expert scientist. On a parity with scientific knowledge he places the ability to understand and sympathize with human nature and all the idiosyncrasies besetting mankind. In Dr. Kitchen's sight, a physician without these human qualities is just a "mere machine."

He thinks little of the doctor who learns a lot of scientific medicine to the exclusion of cultural things.

"His education must not be confined to test tubes," the author wrote. "He must possess a breadth of culture that will enable him to understand the social problems that confront him. He must be acquainted with the history of his profession in order that he may orient himself in it. He must know something of the history of human thought in order that he may not get lost in the miry maze of the present."

Harold Lloyd Abandons "Gags" to Take Place Among Real Character Comedians

In "Cat's Paw" Screen Funster Revises Method

By Nelson B. Bell.

When "The Cat's Paw," Fox Films' picturization of the story by Clarence Buddington Kelland, is released on August 7, it is promised that the country and the world will be introduced to a new Harold Lloyd; a Harold Lloyd who has turned a sharp corner in comedy, streamlined for action and developed for character, instead of merely a patient buffer for slapstick and "gagging."

This will be a metamorphosis it will be interesting to observe. It has always seemed to me that Harold Lloyd, despite his reputation as a great screen comic, has never been as funny as the situations in which he has been placed.

Unfailingly surrounded by the best comedy constructionists and gag-writers to be found, Lloyd, up to now, has invariably been The Boy—usually a hick kid, of one sort or another—intent on winning The Girl over insuperable difficulties and impediments.

This has been as fixed a formula for him as Dick Barthelmess' constant utilization of the "Jack, the Giant Killer" motif, to which he has adhered practically without deviation ever since his elevation to individual stardom in Joseph Hergesheimer's "Tol'able David."

Actor-Proof Vehicles.

So skillfully have Harold Lloyd's vehicles been contrived that few have stopped to realize that anybody else would have been as amusing in them as their star. A majority of them have been based largely on the accepted theory, which, incidentally, does scant credit to human nature, that everybody will be vastly amused and highly diverted by the spectacle of somebody else's persecution or discomfiture. You and I are just as funny slipping on a banana peel as Harold Lloyd is, and it is for that reason and to that extent that I have never looked upon him as a great comedian.

Now all that is to be changed, so we are told. Lloyd is going to be seen in a real story, in a real characterization, soundly grounded in the rudiments of drama and possessing a consequent integrity that no earlier Lloyd picture has been able to boast.

His First Published Story.

It is interesting to note that this is the first time in his career, dating way back to the "Lonesome Luke" days, with Bebe Daniels, that Lloyd ever has purchased a story previously published. For the past 15 years, with the exception of the last two years, intervening between his present picture and his last one, "Movie Crazy," the comedian has been producing comedies primarily based on burlesque material. He was determined to find himself a more enduring comic structure, one which would draw upon sources of personality, rather than custard-pie characteristics, for its realism. This is said to have been successfully accomplished in "The Cat's Paw."

The local screening of the "new Harold Lloyd" will be anticipated with keen relish by picturegoers who can not forget such of his earlier films as "Safety Last," "Sailor Made Man," "Grandma's Boy," "The Freshman" and numerous others, even if they were pure hokum. They still were a lot of fun.

With a final rehearsal held yesterday in the Willard Hotel, because of slightly inclement weather on the Monument Grounds, the Washington Community Players will be seen tonight at 8 o'clock in the National Sylvan Theater in a condensed version of Will Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

In case the rainy weather, that seems to be prevalent as this is written Sabbath evening, continues, the performance will be given in the Central High School auditorium, Thirteenth and Clifton streets.

Announcement of the final decision will be made this afternoon through the courtesy of local radio broadcasting stations. The performance is to be repeated tomorrow night, either at the Sylvan Theater or at Central High, depending upon old man Jupiter Pluvius.

Revue Moves Ahead.

It is reported with some satisfaction by Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Gene Ford, Loew stage production chief in New York, who is in town to supervise the staging of the second annual Loew "All Washington Revue," that considerable progress already is being made in the direction of whipping the show into shape.

Marjorie Hartoin, in charge of dance routines at the Capitol Theater, New York, is hard at work putting a line of 22 girls through their paces and routining their dances. Rehearsals are being held daily in the studios of Joe Brown, 1210 G street.

Mr. Ford, the major auditions being over, now is devoting much of his time to the selection of the actual principals for the revue. He declares that he has a far wider variety of local talent from which to choose this year than was the case last—and last year's revue was quite an entertainment, at that, as I remember it. In between times, Mr. Ford is composing blackout skits, right out of his own skull, resetting music and planning an elaborate scenic production.

Chance for Hefties.

There are still a few openings for girls weighing in excess of 180 pounds who wish to take part in a special number to be offered by what Lou Brown brashly refers to as a "beef-trust chorus." Personally, the late Billie Watson to the contrary, notwithstanding, I like "Percheron ballet" better.

And not enough of those "Lindy-hoppers" have put in an appearance yet, either. I haven't the slightest idea what a "Lindy-hopper" is, but if there are any of you out there, and you want to get in this show, right now would not be too soon to make your ambition known to Mr. Barron or Mr. Ford at the Fox.

Definite announcement has been made over the week-end that the master of ceremonies for this year's revue will be Arthur Godfrey, announcer of WJSV's "Sun Dial" program, formerly major-domo of the "Breakfast Club" broadcast over WMAL, and at present flipping a baton in the faces of his own orchestra on the Club Michel roof.

Personal aside to Mr. E. de Star Melcher: Thanks, Eddie, for Friday's gracious paragraphs and congratulations upon having been the best of the "visiting firemen." Or don't you read your Sunday column?

Columbia Steps Out.

If you were to permit that high-strung Southern gentleman, Mr. Sam Galanty, local Division Manager for Columbia Pictures, to back you into a corner and point it out to you, you would be surprised at the shrewd business sagacity that has made, and is making, Columbia one of the sanest, soundest and most successful of the producing companies.

Through the usual expedients of contracting of borrowing, a surprising list of the cinema's great have appeared in Columbia Pictures during the past year. Among them may be mentioned John Barrymore, Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy, Lupe Valez, John Gilbert, Grace Moore, Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Nancy Carroll, Ann Sothern, May Robson, Carole Lombard, Warren William, Glenda Farrell, Guy Kibbee, Victor McLaglen, Walter Connolly, Loretta Young, Spencer Tracy, Gene Raymond, Jack Holt, Fay Wray, Johnny Mack Brown, Edmund Lowe and Alison Skipworth.

At present, the studio has under long-term contract more than 30 players, well known on both stage and screen. This list will be augmented regularly, says Mr. Galanty. And Mr. Galanty makes very few mistakes.

Once the idol of millions, George Walsh, brother of the noted director, Raoul Walsh, and himself the hero of more than 100 pictures, made back in the silent days, when George's superb physique did for him even better than Johnny Weissmuller's is doing for him today, is trying to talk his way back into favor. George was one of the unaccountable casualties that the advent of sound to the films left lying by the wayside. Strangely, George had been on the stage and knew all about reading lines, and the like, before he ever thought of appearing in a picture. That, however, seemed to make no difference. Now he is coming back in a character part in Mae West's new release, "Belle of the Nineties"—but not as the dashing hero he was wont to portray in the old days. There was a time when George Walsh ran Douglas Fairbanks, pere, a pretty close second.

Those Honeymooners.

Mr. De Titta, as you have been apprised here before now, is Washington manager of the Fox Movietone News, honeymooning via Gibraltar, Naples, Rome, Paris, London and whatnot, with his bride of July 6, the former Miss Helen Reed.

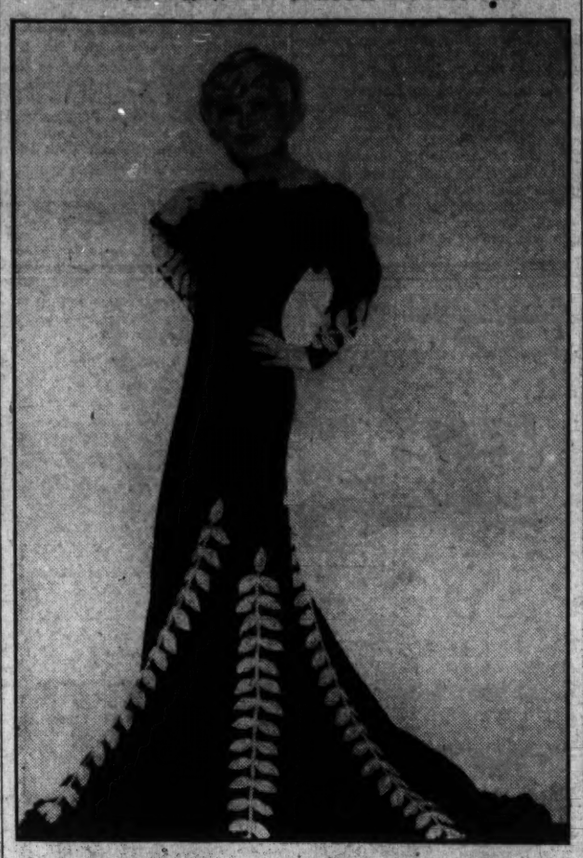
It is pleasant to make known that Mrs. Lou Brown, wife of the director of advertising and publicity for the Loew interests in Washington, is back home with her baby daughter, having been discharged from Sibley Hospital last Thursday. Baby daughter, by the way, is gaining weight so rapidly that Lou and Shirley are thinking seriously of entering her in that "Percheron ballet" in the forthcoming "All-Washington Revue." Conglomerations, as Frank Orth always says.

Curtain Rings Down.

Today the Variety Club of Washington, Tent, No. 11, of the National organization will hold the last of its season's luncheons in the handsome club rooms in the Hotel Willard. Carter Barron and Sam Wheeler are the "kings for a day" in charge of the goings-on.

I am trying to arrange it so that the last shall be first!

Awaited With Bated Breath!



In view of the nature of her past performances, no end of a furore has been kicked up, both in motion picture circles and out, with regard to the possible inopportuneness of releasing Mae West's new picture, "Belle of the Nineties"—or whatever they are calling it by now—at precisely this time. There seems to be nothing sinister in this pose from the picture, unless, perhaps, it might be the extravagance of growing diamond shrubbery against black velvet in times like these. But Mae is like that!

Straight From the Studios

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, July 29. — Immediate plans for Sylvia Sidney are in abeyance. There are two stories under consideration for this star. One is "Red Women" and the other "Broadway Financier." In any event, Miss Sidney is not to play in "Limehouse Nights" with George Raft, Anna May Wong and Montagu Love. The talk is that Heather Angel will get this role now, under a borrowing arrangement with Universal.

HAROLD LLOYD.

Alexander Hall is to direct "Limehouse Nights" on completing "The Pursuit of Happiness," with Francis Lederer and Joan Bennett. Hall had to take the place of Ralph Murphy, who was taken ill with an infected wisdom tooth.

Miss Sidney was not particularly keen about playing the role in "Limehouse Nights," it is understood, which is one of the reasons for her withdrawal from the cast. In fact, it is said that she quite definitely balked at the idea, before being taken out of the cast.

• • • •

In Film Return.

Barbara Kent is returning to pictures. Remember her, when she was doing most promising work at Universal? Later she played the lead opposite Harold Lloyd in "Welcome Danger." Her last film was "Emma," with Marie Dressler.

Miss Kent quit the screen after her marriage to Harry Edington, who has managed the affairs of Greta Garbo, Ann Harding, Marlene Dietrich and other glamorous stars. During her absence she didn't give up all thoughts of screen work, but pursued her study of diction, dramatics, dancing and other aids to a successful career.

Now she has signed with M.-G.-M., and is to have exceptionally important roles in pictures at that studio, especially those of dramatic and emotional ingenue variety.

• • • •

To Judge Beauty.

Gloria Swanson, noted as a beauty, is to become a judge of beauty. She is to do that duty in "Music in the Air," in which she is now appearing as the prima donna. With Erich Pommer she will pick the girls of the chorus in this feature.

Charlie Chan is going right around the world. No sooner is the picture, "Charlie Chan in London" well under way than it is made known that the famous detective character of Earl Derr Biggers' creation will do his next sleuthing in Paris, Warner Oland to be starred, as usual.

• • • •

First Draft Delivered.

At last the first draft of the scenario of "Anthony Adverse" is completed. It has been a five-month job. All manner of stars are being cited for the leading roles. A bid has been put in lately for Gene Raymond, as he would suit the more youthful portions of the story.

• • • •

Cast Increased By Two.

Helen Trenholme, very recently brought here from the East for pictures, and Dorothy Tree have joined the cast of "The Firebird," in which other leading roles are played by Verree Teasdale, Ricardo Cortez and Colin Clive.

Kennedy Slated.

Edgar Kennedy will be cofeatured with Robert Armstrong and William Cagney in two productions for Monogram, in addition to doing a series of short films for Radio. This is in the nature of a branching-out as a player in features for him. He was in "King Kelly of the U. S. A", with Guy Robertson, just finishing up.

• • • •

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Robert McWade will appear in "I Sell Anything," in which Pat O'Brien and Ann Dvorak enact the leads.

Melville Brown, who directed "The Red Head" with Bruce Cabot and Grace Bradley, will direct "Flirting With Danger" next.

Farm Women Going to Camp

Jacksons Mill, W. Va., July 30 (Spl.).—Farm women of West Virginia will gather at the State 4-H camp at Jacksons Mill, August 6 to 11, for their annual summer camp.

All previous records are expected to be broken, according to Miss Gertrude Humphreys, State home demonstration agent for the Agricultural Extension Service of West Virginia University, who will serve again as director.

A feature of the camp will be a study of the handicrafts of West Virginia, under the direction and leadership of Allen Eaton, of the Russell Sage Foundation.

Women attending have been asked to bring a product or article made by herself, a member of her family, or by some one in her neighborhood. They will be arranged for an educational exhibit and will include baskets, brooms, chairs, furnjture, wood carvings, rugs, mats, quilts, pottery, weaving, musical instruments, toys, dolls, lace, knitting, canned products, preserves and jellies.

School Loses Fight On Tax Payments

Waynesboro, Pa., July 30 (Spl.). Judge Watson R. Davison in Franklin County court has ruled that Bellarmine Hall, a school of the Novitiate of St. Isaac Joguets, at Buena Vista east of here, is not a purely public charity and therefor a bill in equity against the tax collector of Washington township, the school directors, road supervisors and county commissioners, can not be sustained.

The suit was made in an appeal to have the institution declared free of tax.

Bellarmine Hall is operated throughout the summer months as a school for young priests. The court held has no regular place of worship. The use of the school it was found is for recreation of members of the society. All of the real estate is not being used in connection with the purposes of Bellarmine Hall and are not necessary to such use.

WHILE thousands of job-seekers still are packing the corridors around the new Federal Housing Administration's personnel office in Room 5334, new Postoffice Building, officials of retrenching agencies are standing by, awaiting FHA requests for lists of dismissed employes.

BAKER

William L. Austin, director, Census Bureau, said last night that no request for a list of available experienced employes had reached his office. Census Bureau dismissals for four days ending tomorrow will total 80. These people, Mr. Austin explained, having been working on the industrial and business census which is being concluded. They were all on temporary appointments and were on machine or card punching duties.

"I will gladly furnish a list of these people to any prospective employer," Mr. Austin said, "as there are among them many excellent workers. I regret to see them go, but the funds for the industrial census have been used and the work is complete. There is no other course for me to take."

Meanwhile, FHA officials pleaded with the public to be patient until their personnel office is organized. They point out that they have not received all the equipment and office space needed to handle applications and other business.

After 40 years' service, Edward G. Whall (*), of 811 Quincy street, will retire today from Government Printing Office. Mr. Whall is superintendent of platemaking and his retirement is optional.

Virginia Auto Crashes Drop

Record Made in Face of 23 Per Cent Increase in Registration.

Richmond, July 30 (AP).—Reviewing and comparing automobile accident records in Virginia, which he compiled recently, J. D. Watkins, safety engineer for the State motor vehicle commission, today said while the country as a whole is showing rather substantial increases, figures for Virginia indicate improvement.

"The result of cooperative efforts between all enforcement officials has made this decrease possible," he said, adding that it has taken place in the face of 23 per cent increase in the registration of motor vehicles in the State.

Recent figures showed that motor vehicle accidents decreased in urban communities 12 per cent and in rural communities 18.2 per cent.

Winchester School Expenses Decrease

Winchester, Va., July 30 (Spl.). Winchester public schools will open for the 1934-35 term September 10, Garland R. Quarles, superintendent of schools, has announced.

Superintendent Quarles has also formally filed his full report for the 1933-34 term, which shows a reduction in the per pupil cost of the schools from $52.48 in 1931-1932 to $43.53 in 1933-1934. Since 1926-1927, the per pupil cost has been reduced 33.2 per cent, he stated. The actual cost of operating Winchester schools was $22,340 less in 1933-34 than in 1932-33, and $36,007 less than in 1931-32, the report showed.

Enrollment in Winchester schools the past term was 56 greater than the previous term. The enrollment of local institutions has grown from 1,813 in 1926-27 to 2,426 in 1933-34, Mr. Quarles stated.

Important Records and Relics Are Exhibited in Williamsburg

Williamsburg, Va., July 30 (AP).—This ancient and historical city, which John D. Rockefeller, jr., is rebuilding to resemble the Williamsburg of colonial times, fast is becoming a depository for important records and relics of early American life.

For a year the restoration committee has been collecting household furniture, paintings, letters and other authentic documents identified with colonial life.

Much of the collection has been placed on public display in the exhibition building of the restoration. Some of the relics, however, are regarded as so valuable for reference work that they have been deposited in archives for use of students in research.

Recent Contributions.

Recent contributions include three original portraits lent by Preston Davie, of New York, and hung in the reconstructed capitol. One is Sir Peter Lely's painting of William, Prince of Orange. Another is Sir Godfrey Kneller's portrait of Queen Mary. The other, painted on wood by Marcus Gheerardts, is of Queen Elizabeth.

Mr. Davie also lent a portrait of Sir Christopher Wren to the College of William and Mary, which is located here.

A silver spoon, dated 1770, found in excavations near Williamsburg; a set of scales used in colonial days, wooden shoe forms of the sort used by the colonists, an oak broom which is well preserved although more than 200 years old, a pedestal on which stood a bust of Sir Walter Raleigh in old Raleigh Tavern, a stone ball ornament from original garden of the Governor's palace at Williamsburg, a chair that belonged to one of the first settlers, and an early bust of Patrick Henry.

Other Relics Distributed.

Relics lent for temporary exhibition include the Speaker's chair from the old capitol at Williamsburg, an ancient warming apparatus used by colonists on winter nights, and a collection of antique furniture and silver used by Gov. Spottswood, first to occupy the palace in Williamsburg.

The restoration, which Rockefeller inspired nearly a decade ago, is progressing rapidly. In addition to the restored capitol, many of the old public buildings and trade places along the main street have been rebuilt with faithful adherence to the architecture brought to the colony by Elizabethan Englishmen.

P. S. Hartman Dies at Home In Rockingham

Mennonite Church Leader Was Business Man and Farmer.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held at Weavers Church, west of here, tomorrow for Peter S. Hartman, 88, leading business man, farmer and churchman of West Rockingham. He died yesterday at his home near New Erection.

He was the oldest member of the Mennonite Church in Rockingham County and was one of its leaders. He was the principal benefactor and one of the founders of the Eastern Mennonite School here.

A successful farmer, he was one of the organizers of the old Rawley Springs Turnpike Co., which constructed the highway from Harrisonburg to Rawley Springs. He served as superintendent of the road for a number of years.

While he never took an active part in politics, he was an ardent prohibitionist and was a leader of the dry forces. He also was strong in his opposition to war.

His widow and three children, all of Harrisonburg, survive.

Virginia to Summon Parley of Brewers

State Board to Discuss Laws on Fixtures.

Richmond, July 30 (AP).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board announced tonight that it will call a conference soon by representatives of all brewers doing business in Virginia.

The purpose of the conference is to discuss beer problems in Virginia in relation to the control act, particularly that section which prohibits retail distributors with fixtures or other aids to their business.

The board feels that better results can be accomplished by dealing directly with the brewers than by trying to teach each of the 4,000 license holders in the State the terms of the law.

Roanoke Farmers Going to Institute

Roanoke, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—Several hundred farmers of Roanoke County are planning to attend the State Farmers Institute of Rural Affairs at Blacksburg beginning tomorrow.

Among the speakers will be Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, who is to tell of progress under the New Deal.

Farmers under the direction of M. G. Lewis, agricultural agent, have organized crop and live stock production control associations so that 95 per cent of all wheat produced for sale in the county is produced by association members. About 75 per cent of hogs raised for sale are controlled by association members.

Methodists Back Clean Film Drive

Richmond, July 30 (Spl.).—Richmond Methodist ministers meeting here today passed a resolution approving the movement to ban objectionable and indecent motion pictures and voted to enlist the churches of their denomination in the campaign.

The session decided to send out a letter to all ministers in the district asking them to place the matter before their congregations.

A campaign of education in the churches and Sunday schools will follow and will be climaxed by the presentation of pledges to the church members.

Two Train Trips End Girl's Tours, Father Declares

Baltimore, July 30 (Spl.).—Home today after a train trip to New York without a ticket, Margaret Debus, 12, found further jaunts barred by order of her father, who is tired of motoring here and there to bring his daughter back to Baltimore.

Margaret has made two train trips thus far within a week—both times without a ticket. Monday she boarded a train with a group of other travelers and settled herself in her seat for a nice trip.

When the conductor asked for her ticket, Margaret said she had none. She was put off at Altoona, Pa. The Travelers Aid Society cared for her until her father drove up and got her.

Yesterday she boarded a train here with a group of other children. This time her luck was better. No conductor asked for her ticket, and she rode all the way to New York.

Luther League to Meet.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 30 (Spl.).—Waynesboro will be host to the thirteenth annual convention of the Luther League of the Evangelical Luthern Synod of Maryland September 1, 2, 3 and 4. Delegates will attend from all Lutheran churches in the Maryland Synod, including the District of Columbia.

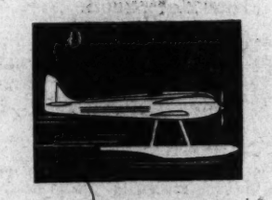
5 features of ELECTRIC COOKERY You Will Like

ECONOMICAL

Hundreds of homemakers have voluntarily told us how little it costs them to cook with Electricity. Families of six and seven prepare three meals a day; do all of their own baking; have many succulent roasts and delicious oven dinners; their average bills, including the use of an Electric Refrigerator and numerous other appliances with their Electric Range, are only about $4.75 per month. Such economy is available to every homemaker.

HEALTHFUL

Only very small quantities of water are necessary when you cook with an Electric Range. Foods cook in their own juices and retain their natural flavors and healthful vitamins. When you cook with fuels which require much water on foods, vitamins are cooked away and you pour them off before serving. It is just like pouring the cream from a bottle of milk down your sink. Electric Cookery makes it possible for you to enjoy all the healthful benefits of essential vitamins.

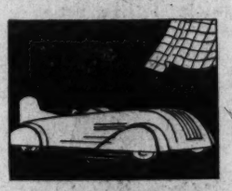


MODERN

Today's Electric Ranges are the last word in modern cooking equipment. They are beautifully styled to harmonize with modern kitchen design and efficiency. High quality and new low prices are being offered by all manufacturers. Accurate and dependable time and temperature controls eliminate the necessity for you to remain at home while meals are cooking. You will have greater convenience and better results when you cook Electrically!

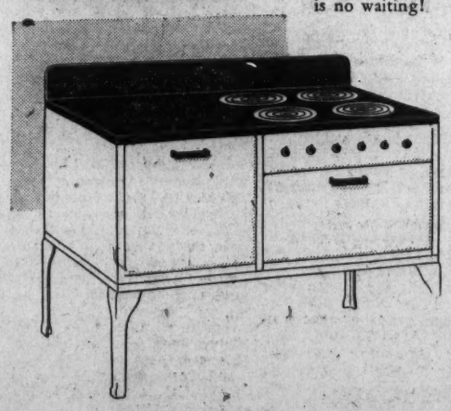
SAFE

One of the seldom considered features of a cooking fuel is its safety. When you have an Electric Range in your home, even your child can use it without danger. There are no valves to become accidentally or carelessly opened. There is no danger of explosion. No matches are ever needed. Electric Cookery alone gives you every assurance of safety and simplicity of operation.



FAST

The march of progress is on! Everywhere, modern scientific research and development is stretching out in its quest for greater speed. In the field of electrical development, great strides have been made in perfecting the speed of electric cookery. Today, electric ranges are f-a-s-t! The new types of heating elements respond with immediate cooking heat at the mere snap of a switch. Electricity provides instantaneous heat. There is no waiting!



Leading electrical shops and department stores are members of the Electric Institute. When you purchase an Electric Range from an Institute member you are assured of highest quality, fair price, and complete satisfaction. Member stores of the Electric Institute are pledged to service and fair dealing. Any Electric Institute member will gladly arrange convenient terms for the purchase of an Electric Range. You may make a nominal down payment, and the balance can be easily budgeted from income.

Miss Babcock Out to Win U. S. Title

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, July 30 (U.P.).—Look out, Helen Jacobs! Little Carolin Babcock is out to grab your title during the National tennis championships at Forest Hills, week after next.

Reflects No Egotism.

This slim, dark-haired 22-year-old lass with the big brown eyes, lightly tilted nose and flashing smile reflected not the slightest whit of vanity or egotism in her admission of title aspirations.

She takes her tennis seriously, believes she is playing better than in 1932, when she soared to the National ranking of No. 3 (last season's slump dropped her to No. 5) and would be "delighted" to be National champion.

"But who wouldn't?" she asked, discussing the situation frankly from a red leather chair "Everyone entered in the national tourney is out to win the title. That's what we're playing for. I figure my stiffest opposition will come from the Americans, Miss Jacobs and Miss Palfrey or from the three England girls: Nuthall, Stammers and James. But I do hope it doesn't rain if I happen to make the final with Miss Jacobs."

Maybe Rain Helped.

We asked her point blank if she thought the roar of thunder, the rain and drenched courts were responsible for her triumph over champion Helen in the Seabright final.

"No," she said. "They may have helped me at times and hindered me at others. I depend much on speed, and the uncertainty of footing certainly didn't help me any. However, the wet grass probably straightened out some of my chop shots and made them harder for Helen to handle. I guess it was a 50-50 proposition."

Concentrated on Match.

But how was it that she beat Miss Jacobs so easily, 6-4, 6-2, after having some difficulties on the previous day in turning back an unranked player, Gracyn Wheeler, of Los Angeles, in the semifinals?

"I concentrated on the match with Miss Jacobs," she explained. "And lifted my game to the top. I played far better against her than against Miss Wheeler, who was at peak form and incidentally is a magnificent player this season. No, indeed, I don't think my win over Helen was a flash in the pan"

Giant Gridmen Sign Pair.

New York, July 30 (AP).—The New York football Giants today received signed contracts from two University of Idaho back field stars, Willis Smith, of Boise, 148-pound quarter back, and John Norby, 195-pound half back from Rupert, Idaho. In Smith the Giants will have the smallest back of the National Football League.

Jack Dempsey Will Referee In Capital

Comes Here Next Monday for All-Star Card at Hunt Club.

JACK DEMPSEY, erstwhile heavyweight champion and prospective papa, will make his first Washington ring appearance since a brief "workout" unveiling some years back, at the Riding and Hunt Club next Monday in the capacity of referee. Dempsey signed to work the all-star card scheduled for that date through Max Waxman, his present business representative, who completed arrangements with Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday.

Promoter Joe Turner, who manages affairs fistic at Griffith Stadium, made several attempts to sign the old Manassa Mauler for his shows, but never was able to catch Dempsey at a time when he was not tied up by previous engagements. The committee arranging the benefit card to be staged at the stadium Labor Day for the Police Chiefs' Convention, was dickering with Papa-to-be Dempsey to referee their show when Ahearn popped into the picture with a definite agreement.

The all-star card at the Hunt Club Monday will be headed by a trio of eight-rounders. Cary Wright, local welterweight, will meet Bob Wilson, the Florida knockout artist, in the most promising of the group. In the others, Joey Zoda will tangle with Roddy Davis and Carl Guggenia will make passes at Al Rigonne.

Baer Shoots 77 to Lead D.C. Five

Campbell, Coast Golfer, Tops Field With 71; Wind Hurts Play.

SOUTH PARK, Pittsburgh, Pa., July 30 (AP).—With the single exception of 22-year-old John Baer, who came back to shoot a 35 on the last nine holes to finish with a 77, Washington represenatives in the National Public Park Golf championships, which opened here today on the hilly South Park course, were literally blown out of a chance to qualify for the tournament proper.

While Albert "Scotty" Campbell, a game University of Washington sophomore, amazed the spectators by shooting a 71 for the only par-breaking score of the day, the five youngsters from the Nation's Capital were distressed lamentably by a steady wind which swept the course throughout the day.

Connelly Cards 83.

Johnnie Connelly, Washington Public Links champion, shot a disastrous 46 over the first nine holes, but cut nine strokes off that score over the incoming route for an 83. Claude B. Rippy shot 41-31 for an 84 and Harlan Will finished with an 82, combining a 43 with a much-improved 39. Harry Saunders also shot an 84.

Sixty-three players shot 79 or better and the chances of the Connelly, Rippy and Will finishing among the qualifiers lay only on the possibility of their shooting near par golf tomorrow. Baier, however, appears well in the running to get through the test rounds successfully and another nice display over the final 18-hole qualifying route should land him well up among the 64 eligibles to battle it out for the championship.

Pitter Pat Wins At Saratoga By Nose

Mrs. W. Sharpe Kilmer's Try Sympathy, the favorite, was second, and Supreme Court, owned by Mrs. James M. Austin, third.

Only a nose separated Pitter Pat and Try Sympathy as they waged a great battle down the stretch with the crowd of nearly 10,000 divided in its support. Try Sympathy, winner of the Hyde Park Stakes at Arlington Park and leading juvenile at Detroit, closed at 11 to 5, while Pitter Pat, second in his only other race, was quoted at 18 to 5.

The victory netted the master of Belair $2,525. It also gave Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons a double as he saddled the Wheatley Stable's Slapdash to win the first race.

The Flash was a two-horse affair from the start, with Try Sympathy guided by Joe Mattioli showing the way to the Woodward colorbearer and Johnny Stout up to the last few strides.

Nats to Open In A's Lair Today

By Frank H. Young.

MANAGER JOE CRONIN herds his Nat players on a train this morning, bound for Philadelphia, where they open a three-game series with the Mackmen this afternoon. The schedule-makers give the Capital City team a respite Friday, with games booked against the Red Sox in Boston on Saturday and Sunday. Then comes an off day, with a long home stand scheduled at Griffith Stadium starting a week from today against the Yankees. Alec McColl will do the Nat flinging in Philly today.

Dave Harris, former Greensboro thief-catcher who discovered that chasing flies was easier and paid better, is still on the Nats' casualty squad and will not make the trip to Philadelphia and Boston. He turned up both Sunday and yesterday to have his bad Charley horse given treatments by Trainer Martin. Harris, by the way, declares that this is the first time this ailment, quite prevalent in the profession, has slowed him up.

Johnny Stone, not hobbling as much as usual, also was on hand. He expects to be giving his injured ankle some mild baseball workouts within a week.

Joe Kuhel, the other Nat invalid, also was a visitor. He will be on crutches for some time.

Gill and Schulte turned in good catches in the early innings of yesterday's game. The left-fielder raced in and to the foul line for Cissell's soft looper opening the game, while the middle gardener came in fast in the fourth for Reynolds' near Texas leaguer.

"If there ever was a 'Peck's Bad Boy' it's that Bill Werber," said Bucky Harris, Sox pilot, laughing before yesterday's game. "He's got a whole kit of trick stuff with him—itching powder, bombs, sneeze powder and firecrackers. While he's quite a pest at times with his pranks in the locker room, he's certainly a great little player and his work has been largely responsible for what success the team has had."

Chalmers Cissell had an easy double-play in sight in the Nats' second yesterday when Kress lined to second with Schulte on first. But the fellow with the fancy name hit Schulte in the back while trying to complete the double-killing. Schulte, by the way, was the first of only two Nats who got as far as second until the Nats packed the aisles in the ninth.

Werber twice showed Cecil Travis how to catch fouls near the stands back of third, at Bolton's expense in the third and with Kress up in the next round. On the latter play, the third sacker snared the ball while lying on his stomach on the canvas roll against the field boxes. It's just a question of hustling and then easing up against the barrier, rather than charging into it and then having to stop for fear of being injured.

Reds Buy Catcher.

Los Angeles, July 30 (AP).—David P. Fleming, president of the Los Angeles Club of the Pacific Coast League, said today he had sold W. Gilthorpe Campbell, catcher, to the Cincinnati Reds. Delivery will be made at the close of the season.

Bluege Fans With 3 On In Ninth

Wes Ferrell Bears Down in Pinches, Although Giving 10 Blows.

Boston's Five Runs in Seventh Are Climax to Onslaught.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

GRIFFITH & CO., INC., producers of rare old goose-eggs, reaped another bumper crop yesterday at the Georgia avenue farm, harvesting a total of nine—all they could get. And while the Nats were gathering nothing in particular the Red Sox were accumulating nine hits and eight runs off the combined offerings of three Washington farm hands disguised as pitchers.

This 8-0 victory gave the Bostons a 2-1 plurality for the short series and put Washington back in sixth place behind the St. Louis Browns, who blackened the collective eyes of Chicago.

The Nats deserve some measure of commendation for their ability to keep out of the scoring column, but Wes Ferrell, Boston's pitcher, must be given an assist. Wes worked under raps, 10 of 'em off the Senators' bats, but the few times that Washington's flawless record was in danger the former Cleveland cleaver unwrapped a brand of superlative pitching that saved the Griffs from embarrassment.

Three On, Bluege Fans.

Seemingly held together by Cronin's strategic adhesive tape, the patched-up Washingtons avoided third base like a plague until the ninth, when it was absolutely necessary for Joe Cronin to put foot on that dreaded sack. 'Frisco Joe might have gone home on the blow that advanced him from second, Sewell's single to left—but there's a limit to everything, even scoreless games. And Ossie Bluege fanned, with three mates quaking in their boots lest he hit, to end this one.

Ed Linke, the Chattanooga recruit, started for Washington and turned up missing halfway through the seventh inning when Boston removed the last vestige of doubt concerning the winner with a deluge of hits and five runs. Just before being derricked, Linke was struck in the abdomen by a terrific liner off Lynn Lary's bat.

Relieved by Crowder.

The fat boy took a few minutes rest then got up and walked back into a withering fire of hits and an erratic streak that hastened his removal. Corp. Al Crowder relieved him and retired the side after Reynolds singled home two of the runners Linke put on base.

Though the drive from Lary's bat undoubtedly hurt Linke it can not be blamed entirely for his ineffectiveness. Ed was in hot water throughout his entire stay on the mound and it is problematical if he would have finished if not injured.

Successive singles by W. Ferrell and Cissell and passes to Werber and Morgan were his undoing.

Cronin Opens Rally.

That ninth inning was Washington's closest approach to the plate. Cronin opened by beating out a single to Lary at shortstop. Bolton, whose magic wand did not ruffle Ferrell, flied to center, but Schulte delivered another single to left and Cronin pulled up at second. Both advanced a peg on Sewell's tap to left after Kress flied to Boston's center.

But Bluege took no chances. Boston might have muffed an easy grounder or dropped a fly ball, so he did the safest thing and struck out.

Boston won the game in the second inning when two runners clattered over the plate on two hits and a walk. Reynolds opened with a two-bagger to left and Solters followed with a pass. Rick Ferrell's single scored Carl and put Solters

Pre-Slump Carnival Spirit Rules Gala Saratoga Opening

SARATOGA SPRINGS RACE TRACK, N. Y., July 30 (U.P.). The Nation's fleetest thoroughbreds thundered down Saratoga's picturesque race track today while society popped bottle corks and displayed "predepression" bank rolls.

The Nation's elite—Millionaires, debutantes and plain lovers of a "hoss race"—mingled with bootblacks, "touts" and the "man from the street" in the betting rings at the initial card on Saratoga's opening day meeting.

The "happy days are here again" theme prevailed from the time the barrier was dropped for the first race. Betting, the officials said, was brisk.

Saratoga, they believed, had returned to the popularity it enjoyed before prohibition. Scores of night clubs which fringe the racing oval likewise reported "increased business."

Some of the gayly attired ladies, those without escorts, experienced difficulty in obtaining beer over the track bars. The owners declined to serve ladies at the bar and waved them to tables. The tables were crowded. The bars were lined by men.

Mrs. Payne Whitney, her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney, led the brilliant array of socialites who occupied box seats. Young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and his mother, Mrs. Charles M. Armory, followed the bangtails through glasses.

Westrope Pilots Bien Fait to Victory in Opening Day Feature at Hawthorne

Easy Winner Pays $6.60 Mutuel

Giggling Leads Entering Stretch, But Falters, Finishes Second.

Bright Shadow Is Third; Four-Length Victory Run in 1:12 2-5.

CHICAGO, July 30 (AP). — Bien Fait, from the Corsicana Stable, which did a lot of front running in the early stages of the American and Detroit Derbies and the Classic Stakes at Arlington Park, only to fade, easily won the Berwyn Handicap today, $1,200 feature of Hawthorne's opening day.

The Audley Farm's Giggling led the procession in the six-furlong event into the stretch, but Jack Westrope, aboard Bien Fait, shook his mount up and flashed past the judge's stand four lengths in front.

Bien Fait's time was 1:12 3-5, and the win price was $6.60 for $2.

Large Field to Enter Allegheny Net Event

Cumberland, Md., July 30 (Spl.). At least 64 players are expected to enter the men's singles of the Allegheny Mountains championship tennis tournament, to be staged here the week-ends of August 4-5 and 11-12. Lorenzo E. Van Sant, director, announced entries would close August 2. Play in the women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles will parallel that in the men's singles.

Over a score of out-of-town stars has already entered the tourney, while over double that number of local players will participate. The matches will be played on the Dingle, Cumberland Country Club and Celanese courts.

Lease Bussard, of Frederick, who gained the first leg on the S. T. Little three-year trophy by capturing the men's singles last year, will return to defend the title.

White Oaks Triumph.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 30 (Spl.).—Home runs by Perry and L. Christy and a triple by Doc Sullivan enabled the White Oaks to defeat the Fredericksburg Elks, 3-0. Rain halted the game in the eighth inning.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DIGNITARY, $61.08, $9.78, $5.02; WESTERN LAD, $2.56, $2.24; JAWAPA, $3.20.

DIGNITARY, slow to begin and raced wide throughout, began to improve his position fast after reaching stretch and, wearing down WESTERN LAD, drew out rapidly in closing strides. WESTERN LAD, sent to front without need of urging and well rated, came away after reaching stretch, but weakened badly. JAWAPA closed resolutely in a good effort. WHERE AWAY, well up throughout, weakened after making a bid in stretch. EDWARD D. quit. CHICASHA dropped out of it on stretch turn. FAIR TIME lost ground. MONROE began sluggishly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIRAC, $4.58, $2.82, $2.20; CHAUVENISM, $3.16, $2.50; DURGA, $2.82.

CHIRAC, on outside throughout and having speed from the start, withstood the drive gamely and outfinished CHAUVENISM at finish. Latter, saving ground throughout, also held on well, but was not good enough. DURGA, inclined to bear in, was going strong in late stages. BAY SERVANT, rank at post but away well, had no mishap. IRISH IMAGE began slowly and was badly outrun. POLYPON fell while at the post and showed nothing. VERGENE bore out

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:13. Off at 4:14. Winner, Southland Stable's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR HOBBY, $10.40, $6.90, $4.04; MISS FLIP, $10.60, $7.38; WILD TURKEY, $7.94.

OUR HOBBY, going in her best form and away fast, maintained command easily to stretch, where she was only mildly shaken up, winning with something left. MISS FLIP, a strong factor from the start, held on courageously, but just lasted to be second after wearing down NORMAN D. WILD TURKEY, on inside throughout, found room to cut stubborn drive. NORMAN D. swerved out when weakening in final furlongs. BROADSTEP, eased approaching turn, where FABULOUS unseated his rider, showed a fine effort. GOOSEFLESH began slowly and lost ground. COOLEY had no excuse.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old colts and geldings; maidens. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:47 Winner, Audley Farm's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHOW BOY, $4.78, $2.72, $2.26; BLUE ARMOR, $2.80, $2.44; BLACK RIVER, $2.88.

SHOW BOY, forced to lose ground throughout and much used in opening quarter, worked his way to front under strong pressure and, weakening, won under strong urging. BLUE ARMOR saved much ground and also faltered badly near end. BLACK RIVER, placed in front on strong urging, gave way fast after reaching last three-sixteenths, but outstayed SICKLE BILL. Latter, kept up while in close quarters soon after the start, raced well. BROTHER LOU was forced to ease before going a quarter and also showed a good effort

FIFTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:13½. Off at 5:14. Winner, R. T. Watts' ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE WAYS, $11.78, $4.46, $3.18; BLUE DAY, $3.14, $2.62; RUBIO, $3.30.

WISE WAYS, having the most speed, slowly drew out after reaching the turn and quickly increased his advantage approaching final eighth, but was mildly ridden out. BLUE DAY, forced wide for room on stretch turn, closed resolutely, but did not menace winner. RUBIO, slow to begin, was inclined to bear over while closing with determination. FLYING JUSTICE quit. BACKLOG stopped badly after reaching stretch. CAPTAIN RED was through early.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200. The Berwyn Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:43. Off at 5:47. †Audley Farm entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIEN FAIT, $6.68, $4.48, $5.54; GIGGLING (entry), $5.60, $7.02; BRIGHT SHADOW (entry), $7.02.

BIEN FAIT, much the best, followed the early pacemaker under steady restraint, took command quickly when ready and appeared to have much in reserve. GIGGLING, on inside throughout, weakened after five-eighths. BRIGHT SHADOW, forced to lose ground throughout, held on gamely. GOLD SIGNET bettered his position with a rush, was in close quarters approaching finish, but was not fourth money. MR. AMES, away fast, but unable to keep up and taken back entering stretch, finished strong on outside. PRINCESS CAMELIA and DUSKY DEVIL dropped out of it on the turn.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800. The Roosevelt Road. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:13. Off at 6:14. Winner, Audley Farm's b. c. (3), by Bright Knight—Ethel Gray. Trained by J. F. Patterson. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:13, 1:39 1-5, 1:45 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALLANT MAC, $4.70, $2.42, $2.14; HOWARD, $2.60, $2.14; TINY KITTY, $2.30.

GALLANT MAC, under strong riding throughout, took a short lead entering back stretch, drew away approaching far turn and, was alone in the drive, just lasted. HOWARD, reserved off the pace, went around WAGWOOD and TINY KITTY on stretch turn, stood a long drive gamely, and was wearing down the winner. TINY KITTY had speed from the start, saved much ground and, although failing to withstand the leaders, held on fairly well. WAGWOOD held on gamely. PLAY HOOKY sulked.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:42½. Off at 6:43½. Winner, Miss C. A. Muldoon's gr. f. (4), by Greystee—Mary Hume. Trained by H. D. Sells. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:52 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAMARYE, $9.80, $4.42, $3.66; ROYAL TREASURE, $8.12, $4.60; SERGEANT D., $4.18.

GRAMARYE, cleverly handled, was taken in hand for a breathing spell when ROYAL TREASURE took the lead, responded gamely to pressure in the stretch, overhauled the latter in the closing stages and was drawing clear. ROYAL TREASURE, a keen factor from the start, followed in close pursuit under mild restraint, went to the front when ready, continued gamely to the final eighth, then held on gamely while submitting to the victor. SERGEANT D., in close quarters rounding the stretch turn, failed to be dangerous when clear. ANITA ORMONT gave a good performance under strong riding. SIMON failed to reach contention and appeared to sulk when punished. TREVALLION was done after going half a mile.

Detroit Feature To Genteel Lady

Form Players Have Big Day at Track.

Detroit, July 30 (AP).—The form players had a big day at the Detroit Fair Grounds today, favorites or second choices taking a majority of the events.

That held true even in the featured sixth event when Genteel Lady, taken from the Dixiana Farm string by C. E. Garrigan via the claiming route, galloped home a length in front of a small but classy field.

Bartering Kate, picked as a strong contender, broke on top but gave way to General Pulaski at the quarter pole. Neither could stay up there, finishing among the also-rans, while Fretful grabbed off second money and Martin Barton took the show purse. The win

Stocks Droop As Sales Fall Below Million

Volume on the stock exchange dropped below a million shares for the first time in more than a week for a full session. The total was 805,000 shares compared with 2,213,516 Friday.

Prices were mixed at the close and mostly lower. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks showed a loss of four-tenths of a point at 68.9.

Stocks Ignore Commodities

Stock market traders ignored the bulge in commodities. In fact, further talk of drought damage brought some early selling into railroad and mail order shares. Santa Fe and Sears Roebuck sold at new 1934 lows on declines of more than 2 points, but the liquidation did not spread to other sections of the list in volume.

Failure of weakness in spots to induce general liquidation heartened some bulls and the market mustered better support in the afternoon.

Wall street began to study prospects of a seasonal upturn in business. Signs of that were still lacking. Hopes have not been abandoned for an autumn pick-up, although they have been revised on account of the drought losses.

Some favorable second quarter earnings statements were given consideration. Westinghouse Electric and American Rolling Mill were aided by the profit statements of those companies, showing material improvement in comparison with last year.

General Railway Signal spurted nearly 6 points on small buying. Otherwise, movements for the most part were narrow. American Telephone was an early weak spot. It sold at a new year's bottom at 105¾, but rallied 2 points and closed only fractionally lower.

Packing shares were not appreciably affected by talk of a general strike in the Chicago stockyards. Metals rallied a little. U. S. Smelting sold 2¼ points higher and smaller gains were registered for Howe Sound, McIntyre and Cerro de Pasco.

Motor Shares Easier.

Motor shares were easier. Trader observers reported automobile sales were slackening after resisting seasonal influences toward recession recently.

Trade statistics continued to make unfavorable comparison with last year, but revealed little change in current trends. Chesapeake & Ohio reported loadings last week totaled 29,561, compared with 28,966 the week before and 33,807 in the corresponding period last year.

Foreign exchanges were narrow, reflecting little worry over European events.

(Associated Press.)

Oil—Underlying conditions in the petroleum industry were reported to be improving gradually with the major refiners continuing to purchase surplus gasoline stocks in the east Texas market, which has caused a general stiffening in the mid-continent motor fuel price structure.

Pulp and Paper—Severe drought conditions over wide areas were said to have considerably affected production of mechanical pulp in both the United States and Canada. Prices of both mechanical and chemical pulp have held unchanged, however, although the demand for newsprint was reported as continuing fair.

Pig Iron—Reduced operations in foundries, due to combination of weather, reduced markets for cast products and ample supplies of unused material on hand, have caused a recession in activity in the pig iron market within the past week. One trade observer stated that it was doubtful if the aggregate business in the New York market exceeded 500 tons during the last week.

Furniture—June furniture bookings by manufacturers in the Chicago district were more than 25 per cent under the total reported for the same month last year, according to reports to Eastern trade circles. Shipments decreased 27 per cent, it was estimated.

Silver—June production of silver throughout the world was reported at 15,193,000 fine ounces, compared with 16,131,000 ounces in the same month a year ago, according to statistics compiled by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

By Ralph West Robey.

Most important of all the positive factors in the business outlook at present is the drought. Upon it probably will rest in the final analysis how much further trade will recede this summer and whether there will be the customary seasonal upturn this fall. Opinions still differ widely, but everyone now is agreed that the drought has gone so far that it makes immediate recovery more difficult.

Up until a few weeks ago there still were many observers that felt the drying up of crops might be converted into a business stimulant. The reasoning was that it would help prices and this in addition to the excuse it afforded the Government to pour money out, would give a net addition to the total volume of purchasing power. It was concluded, accordingly, that trade might be better than would have been the case with heavy surpluses hanging over the market and more limited spending by the Government.

No Longer Is Felt Possible To Offset All the Losses.

Now this view has more or less completely disappeared. The destruction of purchasing power has gone too far to make it possible for the Government to offset it by relief. In consequence it now is viewed largely as only a question of how far the contraction of purchasing power will have an effect in dragging down the volume of trade.

This can not be appraised with any accuracy. Perhaps the most favorable view that can be taken is that in the drought arears the farmers will be on the barest subsistence level. They will be provided this by the Government. In the rest of the country—those parts where the drought has not struck—the income of the farmers will be fairly good. In such sections, accordingly, there will be a good supply of purchasing power and presumably pretty good trade.

Final Decision Rests Upon Weight of the Two Sections.

The final problem, then, comes down to judging the relative importance in our economy of these two broad divisions. Optimists are inclined to hold that the sections in which there are good crops, plus the relief expenditures of the Government, will be sufficient to prevent the net effect from being especially bad. Others hold that the areas of good crops are too small to make this possible. They see the drought, therefore, as a powerful force tending to pull the volume of business activity to lower levels.

Among the latter the only hope for a fall recovery is that other forces will get in motion that will offset the effects of the drought. What these forces will be they do not know. Uncertainty still is too widespread among business men for them to move ahead with any great activity. The capital markets, too, still are heavy, and in one or two of the recent issues there has been a decided "stickiness" with the result that there is less inclination to rush into long-term underwriting.

Which of these two schools of thought will prove to be right is a question that only time can answer. In the meantime, nevertheless, it is well to recognize that there is a growing feeling among expert analysts that a fall upturn is questionable.

Bond Market Edges Higher In Dull Session

Depressed Carriers Rally; Sales Volume Drops to $9,246,000.

New York, July 30 (AP).—The bond market resumed its summertime shuffle today. With trading relatively dull, most price changes were narrow and unimportant.

Transfers totaled $9,246,000, par value, compared with $18,814,000 last Friday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues edged up one-tenth of a point to 84.5.

Pressure was noticeable against several of the rails during the early hours, but this relaxed somewhat later and many of the depressed carriers finished above their lows of the session. Scattered utilities and industrials displayed a firm undertone.

On Advancing List.

Childs Co. 5s held a gain of 2⅞ points at 82¾, and U. S. Rubber 5s advanced 1¼ to 83½. Moderate improvement shown by some loans of American Rolling Mill, American Telephone, American Water Works, Consolidated Gas, International Telephone, National Steel, Pure Oil, Remington Rand, United Drug, Warner Bros. and Western Electric.

Columbia Gas 5s of 1961 lost 2 points at 82 and Postal Telegraph 5s were ⅝ lower at 43⅛.

Federal Loans Gain.

While U. S. Government securities were not so active, the majority recorded advances of 1-32nd to 8-32nds of a point. There were a few Treasury declines of equal amounts.

The foreign section was quiet and mixed. German Government 5½s yielded 1 point at 34 and the 7s were off ⅞ at 47⅛. Some other Reich issues improved. Austrian 7s of 1943 recovered 1⅝ at 96⅞.

Curb's Prices Close Mixed in Lighter Sales

New York, July 30 (AP). — The curb market closed irregular today. The volume of dealings was sharply curtailed in comparison with last week's expanded activity.

Prices were rather steady at the start but selling followed and at the end of the first hour declines of fractions to around a point were scattered freely throughout the list. Offerings, which were generally light, subsided by the noon hour and mild recovery occupied the afternoon trading.

Several firm spots developed among oils and metals. Utilities got back practically all of their losses. Some of the inactive shares sold off sharply in the forenoon.

General Tire and Rubber, Aluminum Co. of America and Dow Chemical finished 2 to 3 lower. Fractional declines were shown by Hiram Walker, Swift & Co., American Cyanamid B and Humble Oil. Electric Bond and Share erased a small loss, while Consolidated Gas of Baltimore rose 2½ in a light transfer. Gulf firmed a point, while Lake Shore, Standard Oil of Indiana and Wright Hargreaves improved.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A holiday feeling prevailed in the inactive session on the stock exchange today, the Austrian situation being regarded as more reassuring. Gilt-edged securities, industrials and kaffirs held steady while German and Austrian bonds were firmer. Home rails and transatlantic issues eased. The market closed quiet.

Paris—The undertone was steady in a quiet session on the bourse today, although the effects of Thursday's and Friday's liquidation was reflected in the slight drop in rentes. The closing was heavy.

Flour Markets.

New York, July 30 (A.P.).—FLOUR—Steady; spring patents, 7.60@7.90; soft winter straights, 6.25@6.40; hard winter straights, 6.90@7.15.

World's Consumption of Cotton Is Placed at 13,564,000 Bales

Use of United States Product, However, Is Larger Than 1933-34 Output; Amount Spun in Nation's Mills Is Below 1932-33.

Although world consumption in the 1933-34 season was somewhat smaller than in 1932-33, when world spinners used 14,405,000 bales of the American staple, it was somewhat larger than production in 1933-34, with the result that the world carryover at the end of the season was further reduced.

The Exchange Service estimates the world carry-over of American cotton as of July 31, 1934, at 10,836,000 bales, as compared with 11,754,000 bales a year ago, and 13,228,000 bales two years ago.

U. S. Cotton Use Cut.

"World consumption of American cotton during the 1933-34 season approximated 13,564,000 bales, according to our preliminary estimate," says the Exchange Service report. "Last season, world consumption of American cotton totaled 14,405,000 bales, two seasons ago 12,506,000, three seasons ago 11,113,000, four seasons ago 13,021,000, and five seasons ago 15,226,000.

"Accordingly, world spinners used 841,000 bales less American cotton in 1933-34 than in 1932-33, but they used 1,058,000 bales more than in 1931-32, 2,451,000 more than in 1930-31, 543,000 more than in 1929-30, and 1,662,000 bales less than in the pre-depression season of 1928-29. In the United States, consumption of the American staple was 7.5 per cent smaller in 1933-34 than in 1932-33, and in foreign countries it was 4.6 per cent smaller.

"Our estimate of world consumption of American cotton of 13,564,000 bales for the 12-month period ending July 31, 1934, is, of course, a preliminary estimate, based on the best data available at this time, and is subject to minor revisions when complete returns on domestic consumption and on foreign consumption and mill stocks become available.

Season's Total Smaller.

The season total is somewhat smaller than was generally expected several months ago, owing largely to the sharp contraction in domestic cotton consumption during June and July as a result of the NRA order restricting mill activity from June 4 through August 26 to 75 per cent of the former allowed maximum. Foreign consumption of American cotton was well maintained during June and July, and registered only a slight seasonal decline.

"In the United States, consumption of American cotton in 1933-34 was somewhat smaller than in 1932-33, but it was considerably larger than in 1931-32 and in 1930-31, approximating 5,551,000 bales as compared with 6,004,000 last season, 4,744,000 two seasons ago, 5,084,000 three seasons ago, and $5,803,000 four seasons ago.

Consumption in Britain.

"Consumption in Great Britain was the largest since 1928-29, totaling about 1,046,000 bales as against 1,365,000 last season, 1,323,000 two seasons ago, 944,000 three seasons ago, and 1,390,000 four seasons ago.

"Spinners on the Continent of Europe used more American cotton than in any season since 1929-30; they consumed about 4,173,000 bales as compared with 4,079,000 last season, 3,499,000 two seasons ago, 3,497,000 three seasons ago, and 4,228,000 four seasons ago.

"In the Orient, consumption of American cotton fell below the high levels of last season and two seasons ago, but it was well above the totals of seasons prior to two seasons ago; spinners of the Orient used 2,163,000 bales as against 2,721,000 last season, 2,731,000 two seasons ago, 1,384,000 three seasons ago, and 1,397,000 four seasons ago.

"Mills in Canada and in minor cotton-consuming countries on the American continent used 271,000 bales as compared with 236,000 last season, 209,000 two seasons ago, 204,000 three seasons ago, and 204,000 four seasons ago.

Carryover in World.

"We estimate the world carryover of American cotton as of July 31, 1934, at 10,836,000 bales, subject to minor revision when complete returns are available," continues the service. "World consumption of American cotton in 1933-34 was somewhat larger than production, resulting in a further decrease in the carry-over. The world carryover at the end of last season totaled 11,754,000 bales, two seasons ago 13,228,000, three seasons ago 8,919,000, four seasons ago 6,187,000, and five seasons ago 4,517,000.

"We estimate the carry-over of American cotton in the United States as of July 31, 1934, at 7,662,000 bales as compared with 8,081,000 at the end of last season, 9,580,000 two seasons ago, 6,263,000 three seasons ago, 4,322,000 four seasons ago, and 2,131,000 five seasons ago.

We estimate the carry-over of American cotton abroad at 3,174,000 bales as against 3,673,000 at the end of last season, 3,648,000 two seasons ago, 2,656,000 three seasons ago, 1,865,000 four seasons ago, and 2,386,000 five seasons ago."

Wool Market.

Boston, July 30 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—Despite the persistent opinion of a number of wool houses in Boston that an improvement in demand for wool was not far away, there was an easier feeling in regard to the price situation than was apparent a week ago. Nominal quotations, however, remained mostly unchanged from the close of last week.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool in Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during the week ended July 28, amounted to 10,844,000 pounds, compared with 11,512,400 during the previous week.

Wheat Rallies As Corn Tops Peak Prices

Crop Curtailment Reports Aid Rises; All Grains Advance.

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—Sensational curtailment of 1934 crop production estimates led to brisk buying and decidedly higher prices in the corn and wheat markets today. All deliveries of corn overtopped peak quotations as far back as July 21, 1933.

The chief immediate stimulus came from an authoritative unofficial report indicating that the Nation's corn crop had been reduced this month about 25 per cent, nearly 500,000,000 bushels, as the result of abnormal heat and drought.

A yield of 1,616,000,000 bushels was suggested, the smallest in 33 years.

All Grains Up.

Corn scored a maximum upturn of 2¼ cents, and closed strong 1⅜ to 1¾ above Saturday's finish; wheat, ⅞ to 1⅜ up; oats, ¼ to ¾ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17 cents.

Adding to the upward impetus of the corn market was the fact that the Government's August crop report appeared likely to show still greater losses of corn.

The data for today's unofficial estimate was gathered a week ahead of that which will be used by the Government, and there is no rain of consequence the past few days. Moreover, first-hand observation on the part of one of the foremost Chicago crop experts was summarized by him today to the effect that the corn fields of northern Illinois were never before so unpromising at this stage as they are at present.

Jumps of Corn.

Jumps of the corn market were in the face of liberal profit-taking sales and notwithstanding further large purchases of corn to arrive here, increasing to approximately 11,000,000 bushels the total bought so far this month.

As compared with a month ago, corn at today's top figures showed an advance of more than 10 cents a bushel.

Wheat and oats borrowed strength from corn. Eastern houses were aggressive buyers of wheat, a course partly associated with bullish Canadian crop advices, and with 20,000,000 bushels July reduction of the estimated total of domestic spring wheat yield.

Steel Plants Expect Upturn During August

July Called Low Point in New Tonnage; Rate Is 29½ Per Cent.

Cleveland, July 30.—July has been written off by steelmakers as a period of absorption of consumers' stocks, and the year's low point in new tonnage, while they appear confident the approaching month will bring some improvement, especially in commitments by automobile manufacturers, states the magazine Steel.

These manufacturers now are releasing only material to round out inventories, unbalanced by the seasonally-strong rate of production, with which to complete schedules for current models. Between August 15 and September 1, they are expected to begin releasing for new models. Inquiries have already been issued direct by some producers and partsmakers.

The reliance which steelmakers place on automobile manufacture to supply tonnage in the future, and thereby absorb some of the slack in other channels of consumption, is indicated by the construction or authorization of mills with annual capacity for rolling 3,690,000 tons of sheets and strip, of the class mainly used by the automobile industry, at a cost of $42,000,000. In the same period—since the steel code went in effect last August—expansion in facilities for rolling other finished steel products has been limited to two small tube mills, while no raw steel or pig iron capacity has been built.

Structural Awards Up.

In contrast to the widespread contraction in steel orders from practically all consuming groups last week, structural steel awards increased to 19,340 tons, nearly double the amount placed in the preceding week. Federal and State Government work still is the chief support of the structural steel market, with only a sprinkling of industrial needs.

Demand for steel for Western dam projects is the most active feature of the markets. For Boulder Dam 5,500 ton of concrete bars was awarded. General contractors for the Grand Coulee Dam, Washington, which in steel requirments rivals that of Boulder Dam, are in the market for $6,000,000 in machinery and equipment for delivery within three months. New projects include 5,000 tons of structural shapes for a State viaduct in Baltimore. Contractors for Cleveland's easterly disposal plant are expected this week to award 4,100 tons of steel.

Early action is contemplated on the 24 naval ships requiring 42,000 tons of steel, bids for which will be opened August 15, half the number to be placed with private builders, others with Government yards. Oil companies have awarded a few tanks, requiring moderate size tonnages of plates. The Pennsylvania Railroad has released 28 electric locomotives, originally ordered in 1931. Construction of 2,500 to 3,000 hopper cars is being considered by an Eastern railroad.

Municipal Markets Poor.

Municipalities, facing formidable tax delinquencies, despite offers of Federal financing are presenting the poorest maket in years for pipe. Boston has purchased 1,572 tons of steel pipe; Chicago is to award 2,228 tons of cast pipe shortly.

Steelmakers anticipate a good volume of buying from agricultural districts in the fall. In the areas where the drought has not been severe, heavy crops are maturing. In addition, farmers in the Central West will be subsidized to the extent of a half billion dollars.

Scrap prices show further easiness in all districts, Steel's iron and steel scrap composite off 4 cents, to $10.25. Foundry operations in the Middle West are down to 35 per cent; pigiron producers do not look for resumption in buying until late in August. Domestic fluorspar has been reduced $1 to $1.50 a ton.

Steel prices show no further deflection, but lack a test. Rigid electrical conduit, a product which does not come under the provisions of the steel code, has been advanced $8 a ton.

Steelworks operations, as a National average last week dropped ½ point, to 29½ per cent, lowest since the second week in January. Youngstown advanced 4 points, to 35 per cent; Buffalo, 8, to 29; Cleveland dropped 3, to 33; New England, 4, to 48; eastern Pennsylvania, 2½, to 22½; Pittsburgh, 1, to 20; while Detroit remained at 76; Chicago, 34; Birmingham, 20, and Wheeling, 27.

Steel's iron and steel composite is unchanged at $34.19, while the finished steel composite remains $54.

New York, July 30 (AP)—The American Iron & Steel Institute estimates steel ingot production during the current week at 32 per cent of capacity, compared with 27.7 per cent a week ago and 23 per cent a month ago. The current figure is a drop of 1.6 points, or 5.7 per cent.

Mat Test Is Due George Here Thursday

ED (called Don, for short) George comes to the Capital to practice his mat mayhem Thursday night with the avowed purpose of stealing Champion Jimmy Londos' thunder here, even if he has been unable to knock the gorgeous Greek's crown from his manly brow.

From a distance, George, who recently held the Greek Adonis to a 3 hour and 40 minute draw, is shooting fiery blasts as to how great he is, how good Jim Browning is, and what a punk Londos is. According to George, who holds the Canadian and New England rights to the world title claim, Browning is better than Londos and he is better than Browning.

District rassle addicts may form their own opinion here Thursday night, however, for Ed takes on Sandor Szabo in the feature bout of a good card and will be given plenty of opportunity of showing that actions speak louder than words.

Szabo First-Fighter.

Szabo, perhaps not as flashy as when he first came to this country from Hungary and won 42 bouts hand-running, is still a first-fighter of the first water. If George gets by this hurdle, the fans will have to admit that he is at least almost as good as he thinks he is.

But, whether or not George is Londos' superior, there is no question but what he is the better showman. He employs the modern style in his leering, tackling, charging, Thor-hammering and what not—and it is this type of brawling that makes the cash customers become cash customers.

Gino Garibaldi takes on Floyd Marshall, one of the villains of the game, in the semifinal, while rounding out the card will be fracases between Joe DeVito and Harry Fields, Mike Romano and Vanka Zelesniak and Marshall Blackstock and Charles (Pretty Boy) Allen. Not only do Marshall and Blackstock share the same name (Marshall), but they have one other thing in common — they consider draws as moral victories; yet their tactics are so unethical that they have quite a following which gets its pleasure in seeing them beaten up. It's just another of the queer twists in human nature which this peculiar game brings out in fans and participants alike.

WHY SHOP ENDLESSLY FOR A USED upright or grand piano when right under one roof you may see, test and compare prices of good used pianos in great variety. You'll see, too, the wisdom of buying instruments thoroughly regulated or rebuilt by Kimball factory experts, including guaranteed service without additional cost following purchase. These Kimball advantages are seldom realized in dealing elsewhere while the additional expense contingent in purchasing pianos at auction or private sale reacts severely upon the price of so-called bargains.
Visit KIMBALL'S before you buy; not afterwards. 721 Eleventh st. nw., 3 doors north of Palais Royal.

Another Day.

On Mother's Day we made it plain how well we felt and knew that mothers hold their quiet reign o'er all good men and true. As time goes sliding down the hill, the poet's words survive, "a mother is a mother still, the holiest thing alive." Then we were called to celebrate a happy Father's Day; we showed that we appreciate our dads, now bent and gray. We gave our fathers costly gifts to cheer those ancient men, and if there had been household rifts, they were forgotten then. These days were such a great success I'm sure we should have more; our aunts and nieces, I confess, have reason to be sore. No special days have been designed to celebrate their worth, those females of the gracious mind, the ornaments of earth. We ought to have an Uncle's Day, for Uncle is our friend; when he's assured we can repay, he's always prompt to lend. Our uncle has three golden balls above his modest door, and there we soak our overalls when we are broke once more. And there we take the eight-day clock, whose chimes have dulcet tones, and uncle figures with some chalk, and lends us seven bones. Whene'er a grievous slump occurs, our uncle is in line, we take to him the priceless furs we wore in '29. To him we take all kinds of junk when trouble near us flits, and if he cannot spare a plunk, he hands us out two bits. He lends a nickel on a lamp or on a coal oil can; there ought to be a special stamp in honor of this man.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Benny May Be Present in Spirit By Harry J. Tuthill

HE WENT OVER TO TALK TO THAT DIZZY GROCER WHO'S SQUAWKING ABOUT HIS BILL.
THERE'S NOTHING TO EAT IN THE ICE-BOX, EITHER. THAT'S NOT SO HOT. IS GEORGE GOING TO BRING STUFF BACK WITH HIM? EGGS AND....
LISTEN ALF, DON'T WALK BACK AND FORTH BEFORE THAT WINDOW. THOSE PEOPLE NEXT DOOR BEEFED TO GEORGE ABOUT THAT EARLY THIS A.M.
BOYS, I DREAMED ABOUT BENNY ALL LAST NIGHT. HE STOOD AT MY BEDSIDE POINTING TOWARD THE PANTRY WHERE WE'VE GOT HIS TEETH THAT WE FOUND IN THE ASHES OF THE LODGE HALL.
H-MM!
BENNY DINKY WAS TOO BIG A MAN TO HAUNT PLACES, ESPECIALLY A LODGE BROTHER'S HOME!
YOU'LL ADMIT HE LOVED TO GO TO TRIALS. I KNOW HE'D LIKE TO BE HERE WHEN WE TRY THOSE....
LISTEN BOYS, WHY CAN'T WE USE THIS AS OFFICIAL PROOF AT THE TRIAL THAT THOSE TEETH BELONGED TO OUR PAL BENNY?

YOU SAY YOU'LL HAVE TO START DIGGING POTATOES PRETTY SOON — I SUPPOSE YOU'LL HAVE TO USE A STEAM SHOVEL FOR THAT JOB—
WE WILL IF WE DON'T HURRY— IF YOU LET 'EM GROW THEY GET SO BIG YOU CAN'T HANDLE 'EM— WE HAVE TO ROLL 'EM IN ONE AT A TIME— YOU WON'T BELIEVE ME WHEN I TELL YOU— ONE OF EM GOT AWAY FROM ME ONCE— ROLLED DOWN THE BANK AND WENT RIGHT THROUGH THAT HILL OVER THERE— KILLED A FEW HORSES AND A COUPLE OF COWS— BUT I SOLD THE HOLE TO A RAILROAD—
